NOT A CANDIDATE.

President Harrison Says He Has Not Nor Will He Proclaim His Candidacy.

If The People Desire Him, He Presumes They Will Signify Their Wishes.

Not a Young Robin With Widely Opened Mouth Ready to Catch Everything.

NEW YORK, May 27.—A special to the World from Washington gives an interview had by its correspondent with President Harrison, in which the president explained his own position as regards the nomination. The president is reported to have said: "I am too well acquainted with the meaning of the office of the president of the United States not to understand the importance of the work to be done at Minneapolis. For myself I am not, to use a homely expression, a young robin with a widely open mouth ready to catch everything that comes. I have spent three very active years in the discharge of public duties, during which period of time I have acted conscientiously and solely out of regard for my conception of the exigencies of the public service. I have made appointments as nearly as I could in accordance with my views of what was fitting. Of course there have been disappointments. The task of filling public places is so arduous that it can really be understood entirely by only the one on whom the responsibility rests. Disappointments sometimes cause discontent, and discontent may manifest itself openly. I do not believe that individual disappointments will control the convention at Minneapolis.

"Mr. President, in view of the recent publications, do you now announce your candidacy for re-election?" The president replied with emphasis: "I have never announced myself a candidate and I do not now. I did not in 1888 on the occasion of the Chicago convention." As if to accentuate what he had said the president repeated: "I make no such announcement." He added: "The convention at Minneapolis will assemble and take its own action. I am aware that I have been criticised for not calling on my friends and others for their support, but I have been disinclined to do so and my feelings have undergone no change. My public and private records are known to the people, and whatever they wish will be manifested at Minneapolis. If the people, having in consideration the manner in which I have conducted the presidency, desire me, I presume they will signify their wishes. Meanwhile I have no intention of announcing my candidacy."

FIT FOR ANYTHING.

Secretary Blaine Examined and Pronounced Perfectly Sound.

NEW YORK, May 27.—A special to the Press from Washington says: "Dr. Pepper, of Philadelphia, provost of the university of Pennsylvania, one day last week made a thorough physical examination of Secretary Blaine at the latter's request. The doctor sounded Mr. Blaine's lungs, tested his heart, examined his muscles and tested all other vital organs. After the examination was finished Dr. Pepper said to Secretary Blaine: 'Mr. Secretary, you are a perfectly sound man. There is not a symptom of organic disease about you. The only possible defect that I can discover lies not in either your vascular or your muscular system. Your nervous system is a little strained, but that can be speedily remedied. You want to look after your eyes and take plenty of exercise. With these precautions you are fit for anything.'"

The Press says this was one, and perhaps the most striking, of many stories narrated Wednesday night at the dinner given by Senator Allison to the following gentlemen: Chairman Clarkson, Vice President Morton, Senators Hale, Aldrich, Hawley, Davis, McMillan and Jones of Nebraska, and Representatives Burrows and Henderson, of Iowa. The story about Mr. Blaine's physical condition was supplemented by the statement made upon the authority of one socially intimate with Mrs. Blaine that the lady was greatly pleased with the results of Dr. Pepper's tests and that Mrs. Blaine is more than ever willing that the secretary of state should accept the nomination, provided it comes as a voluntary gift offering from the Republican party, as represented at the Minneapolis convention.

AND THE FARMER LOST.

An Old Game Played on a California Farmer.

YUBA CITY, Cal., May 27.—A. H. Holland, a wealthy farmer, was driving with a stranger who called himself Judge Love, of San Jose, yesterday, when they met another man who said he was an agent for the Louisiana lottery. He was willing to explain how the game could be beaten. Holland and the supposed judge each won. Then Holland drew $100 from the bank, "Judge Love" put up a like amount, the stranger covered it. It was all put in a tin box and the game began. Holland won. There was only some iron washers in the box he got, though a year ago a neighbor of Holland's was swindled in the same way.

Blaine Endorsed. FORT WAYNE, Ind., May 27.—A lively scrimmage in the district convention yesterday resulted in the election of the Blaine candidate for chairman over the Harrison candidate. Resolutions endorsing the candidacy of James G. Blaine were presented and adopted.

OVERCOME BY SMOKE.

One Fatality and Several Accidents at a Boston Fire.

BOSTON, Mass., May 27.—A fire started about 2 o'clock this morning in the upper part of the Hotel Royal, a cheap lodging house at 143 Court street. The fire was quickly subdued by the department, but not before one man had been suffocated and several others overcome by smoke or burned. There were some twenty-five lodgers in this portion of the building and many of them escaped with difficulty.

John Quinn, aged 20, was found in the upper hall unconscious and died at the hospital. C. Clark is at the hospital and may die. W. H. Wright was overcome by smoke and badly burned about the back and arms. F. E. Parks, a cripple, was badly burned about the head and body. These men were taken from rooms in the upper story. They are at the hospital and will doubtless recover. Loss about $3000; insured.

MURDER AT SALT LAKE.

A Barber Shot and Killed Without Provocation.

SALT LAKE, Utah, May 27.—W. H. Lewis, a deputy sheriff at Sandy, five miles south of here, yesterday entered the shop of J. H. Geir, a barber, and without provocation shot and killed the proprietor. Lewis made his escape. As Lewis disappeared Geir called to a companion and said: "That man and I never had a quarrel in our lives. I don't know what made him do it."

Marshal Janney sent out a detail of officers in pursuit of the murderer. He was captured at Mill creek at 5 o'clock last evening. There is strong talk of lynching.

HILL AND CLEVELAND.

A Report that a Truce is Being Patched Up.

NEW YORK, May 27.—The air was full of rumors yesterday of a conference of the utmost importance regarding the candidacy of Grover Cleveland and Senator Hill. A number of prominent Democrats, including Don M. Dickinson, Wm. Slinger, of Philadelphia; Attorney General Hensel and Secretary of State Harrity, of Pennsylvania, and ex-District Attorney John R. Read, of Philadelphia, were in the city.

One report is that Mr. Cleveland's attitude toward the May convention is about to be made known in an authoritative way. Another is that the assembly being made to patch up a truce between Hill and Cleveland.

Gebhardt's New Role.

NEW YORK, May 27.—The Press this morning says that Freddie Gebhardt is out in a new role. He has shown his appreciation of Dr. Keeley's alleged cure for drunkenness by establishing a Keeley institute at Babylon, Long Island.

Cadwallader Indicted.

MADISON, Wis., May 27.—The federal grand jury here has returned an indictment against A. A. Cadwallader, ex-president of the Superior National bank. Cadwallader, who is an Eastern man, is charged with embezzling $40,000.

Arrested for Abduction.

ASHLAND, Wis., May 27.—A special to the Press from Iron River states that Walter Hewitt was arrested there by Oshkosh officials last night for the alleged abduction of a young lady at Oshkosh.

NONE GOING FROM DULUTH.

Trades and Labor Assembly Discusses the Idaho Strike.

The Trades and Labor assembly met last night with a large attendance. The Street Car employees, a new organization, sent three delegates, whose credentials were accepted. Delegate McDowell spoke at length on the miners' strike at Idaho, declaring that the assembly had been successful in preventing any men from being taken from Duluth, but reported that large consignments of unemployed men had been drafted from Ishpeming and other places. A resolution was carried unanimously that the assembly request the Trades and Labor assembly of Superior to co-operate with them in preventing men from being drafted to Idaho while the strike was in force. Mr. Martin, of the Northwestern Union Labor, followed in an able speech on union principles in general and the Idaho miners in particular, and was frequently applauded.

Delegate McDowell moved that the Trades and Labor assembly of Duluth withdraw all patronage, and any implied actual support which may have been in the past extended to the so-called Union Workman or Peoples' Press, published at Duluth, that sheet having departed from the mission it was called to fulfill. This was carried unanimously and ordered published in the daily papers. All trades reported favorably.

DISTRICT COURT MATTERS.

Judge Stearns Files Findings in a Railway Street Assessment Case.

Judge Stearns filed an order today in the district court denying the motion of the plaintiffs for the setting aside of the judgment in the case of Hattie M. Backus et al vs. Frank Burke, Jr., et al. In the appeal of the St. Paul & Duluth railway from the assessment for paving Garfield avenue Judge Stearns decides that one-half of the following lots are not used for railway purposes and are subject to assessment: Lots 107, 109, 111, 113, 115, 117 and 119 in block 27 on Rice's Point. Three quarters of lots 241 to 279 in block 31 he finds are not used and are liable to assessment.

Alderman Martin Sorensen brings an action against the American Exchange bank to recover $5000 damages for refusing to honor his checks on funds deposited in the name of himself and brother Paul, now deceased, as a firm. He also sues to recover $511.70 the amount on deposit with John C. Fletcher, petitions the court for a division of property owned by himself and Henry and Albert F. Stephens in sections 13, 18, 24, 25, 26, 28 and 33, 39-45 and section 4, 58-15. He represents the lands to be worth $100,000.

STRIFE MUST END.

Notice Given to the Fighting Factions in Ireland That They Must Desist.

If They Do Not Cease Wrangling the Sinews of War Will be Withdrawn.

The Position of the Party Under the Dignified Leadership of Parnell Recalled.

NEW YORK, May 27.—The Irish Nationalists' committee appointed by last November's conference to issue an address met yesterday and approved a strong manifesto demanding that the factional strife in Ireland shall cease or America and Australia will not furnish the "sinews of war." They call the conflict going on most scurrilous and declare that it has wellnigh forfeited the confidence of Irishmen abroad, won by twelve years of dignified effort for home rule under Parnell's leadership. The manifesto is signed by the following: J. P. Farrell, New Haven; Thomas F. Keenan, Boston; Dr. William Carroll, Philadelphia; John Devoy, Chicago; James Gibson, Patterson, N. J.; J. P. Howard, Charles O'Donnell, Des Moines; John M. Digney, White Plains; James R. O'Brien, New York; John King, Passaic.

Col. Gresham Dying.

CHICAGO, May 27.—Col. Benjamin Gresham, an elder brother of Judge Walter Q. Gresham, and a veteran of the Mexican and Civil war, is dying at Lanesville, Ind. The dying soldier is 65 years old and during the Rebellion commanded the Third Indiana cavalry.

More Blaine Delegates. CHICAGO, May 27.—The Fourth congressional district Republican convention today elected delegates and alternates to the Minneapolis convention and instructed for Blaine for president.

Gen. Straight Dead.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 27.—Gen. Abel D. Straight, famous as the leader in the historic scheme for escape from Libby prison, by which 108 union officers gained their liberty, died at his home here at 4 o'clock this morning of Bright's disease, aged 63 years.

Marine Notes.

The arrival of the steamer Wagenland at Chicago direct from Norway has led some of the local papers to remark that it is the first occurrence of the kind. This is incorrect as in 1862 the Norwegian bark Slynner arrived in Chicago with a cargo, and in 1864 the Norwegian yacht Scholmoen arrived there. A number of other craft have arrived at Chicago and Milwaukee: direct from the old world. Sometime in 1865 or 1866 E. Roddis & Co., then doing a packing business, loaded a vessel at the rear of their warehouse in the Milwaukee river and sent her direct to Liverpool with some kinds of salt and smoked meats.

Two steamers are to be launched at the American Steel Barge company's yard next week. The company's tug is already ready for her dip into the water.

Logs are coming into port at the rate of about four rafts each day. The little scow schooner, Annie R., has several loads of cedar posts contracted for delivery at this port. They all come from Ann River, Wisconsin.

HOW TO BOOM BUSINESS.

He Owned a Home Supply Emporium and He Could be Denounced He Would be Happy.

Wanted the Reporter to Say He Had Elope With Two Beautiful Daughters of a Leading Citizen.

A Few Hints to Contributors to the Collection Plate Given by the Rev. Ebenezer Jonsing.

As he shot into the editorial arena, he wiped his bald head with a gaudy silk handkerchief.

"I want to be attacked," he said, and he winked at the answers to correspondents editor.

"The man who attacks people, and who reads the innocent core of indignant readers who have had their names spelled wrong in the paper, can be found down that passage second door to the left," said the mild young person who was smiling at the answer to Julia B's request for a recipe to remove freckles from her ear.

"You misunderstand my meaning, young man," said the stranger, as he dived into the side pocket of his duster and produced a 6 by 8 business card, on which was printed:

B. H. PULKEHAM, DEALER IN Choice Teas, Unparalleled Coffee, Cheapest Sugars and all kinds of Family Groceries, Domestic and Imported.

GREAT CONTINENTAL STORE AND HOME SUPPLY EMPORIUM, 42 Washington Avenue.

"Well, Mr. Pulkeham, what can we do for you?" said the editor.

"You see, mister, it's just this way," said the grocer, as he took a chair.

"Business ain't what it ought to be, and ordinary advertising don't seem to draw trade worth a cent. Now, ever since Scheidehoff, who keeps the tea store on the corner above, was accused in the papers of having two wives living—one in the penitentiary and 'other hawking fruit in St. Louis—the women flock to his store to buy their groceries, and he is doing a blazing business. Now I was thinking if one of your smart young men would just write up a column or so about me and say how I had eloped with the two beautiful daughters of one of our leading citizens—need not mention names, you know—and that my wife, for the sake of the family, has kept the horrid secret to herself, it might draw. And you might say to give the thing snap, as it were—I had been converted to the Mormon faith. I tell you if you work it right all of Scheidehoff's customers will just pour around to my store. I'll go away fishing for a few days to make the thing look feasible like, and the sympathy that my wife will get and the trade she'll do will give my business a boom that will tide us over these dull times."

"You are not half as much of a fool as you look," said the editor.

"Well, that's neither here nor there. You send up one of your young men to take the beatings of my place and to get some points as to my bad character from the neighbors. Give me a whole column; don't spare me; say that I keep my old grandmother chained in the cellar. Pile it on as thick as you have a mind to. I'll pay the bill—full rates. A whole column, remember, on the first page, with big headlines. So long!"—Texas Signifier.

A Hint to Contributors.

"Before the collection man tuck up," remarked the Rev. Ebenezer Jonsing, thumping the pulpit. "I want to make a few passing observations, to wit, namely, as follows: Any member of this church in good or regular standing, an any visiting person, has got to rights to put pokah chips in de hat of he wanten, but ef he do has got to put in wid 'em de name ob de genuina what cashes de chips."

"Amen," shouted Deacon Lightfoot.

"An," continued the pastor, "dey ain't agyinter be no no changin money while de hat run passin. Last week dar wuz fo' counterfeit half dollars an de week befo' dar wuz five dropped in, an de genuina what contributed dem half dollars got fo' ty cents apiece in good money, leavin de church an de pastur to hol de bag fo' de diffidence. 'Tidnt none ob my business to be sin'in fault wid german fo' de kin of money dat suits dar pupposes, ef dey doan' gin to contribute his to de fun's of dish yer church an yo' tumble survant, but hit an yo' beloved pastah gits run in by de ossifiers of de laws fo' tryin to buy his daily bread wid pewter dollars. De brethren will now please teck up de collection."—Detroit Free Press.

Rare Vintage.

Among the perils of wine drinking one great danger is seldom remembered, that of flooding one's system with an awful mixture, which has nevertheless been dignified by a high sounding name.

Some years ago at a great sale of wine all the old bottles were purchased by a grocer in Edinburgh. The agent had the curiosity some time after to inquire what use he could have made of such material.

He was shown, by way of answer, a huge rat where all the liquors, from humble Gladstone to imperial Tokay, were fermenting together.

"And what," he asked, "do you propose to call this?"

"I'm not very sure," replied the grocer, "but I think it's going to turn out port!"—Youth's Companion.

Quite Far Enough.

"Mr. Circular, I think this has gone quite far enough."

"Yes, Evelina," replied the young man, "I think it has, unless you would like to have me see if I could get it around twice."—Jester.

What He Ought to Learn.

A young man upon Cass avenue recently bought a cornet with the intention of learning to play. Yesterday the man who sold it to him met his little brother.

"By the way," he inquired, "how is Charlie getting along with his cornet playing?"

"He ain't gittin' 'long at all," sniffed the younger. "He's been blowin' away at it every night, but this morning one of the neighbors come over and told him in plain language that he'd better be learnin' to play the harp, for he might need it soon, and I guess Charlie is goin' to give up music altogether."—Detroit Free Press.

Wouldn't He Missed.

Anxious Stranger—My good man, don't let that child get so near the edge of the lake!

The Other—Oh, I got plenty more zu beim.—Jester.

Powerful Consolation.

The Rev. A. S. Gumbart told the Massachusetts Undertakers' association that he thought he had had a particularly large share of funerals to attend during the two years of his pastorate in the city, and he related some of his experiences with undertakers.

Among them was one for the fruth of which he vouches. He was summoned to officiate at the obsequies of one of his parishioners, and was passing the establishment of the undertaker who had charge of the arrangements, when the latter saw him and called him in.

"What do you think of that casket?" he inquired, with an expression of professional pride.

"It is very handsome," replied the minister.

"Don't you like that fringe?"

"Very much."

"And that lining and pillow. Ain't they great?"

"They are very handsome."

"And the handles?"

"Could not be more beautiful."

"You like the casket then?"

"Very much."

"Well, couldn't you say something about it?"

"How, when and where?" inquired the puzzled minister.

"Why, in the funeral sermon, you know."

"I don't think it would be fit there," replied the minister with a smile.

"Couldn't you say that in the midst of their bereavement it must be a satisfaction to the friends to see the dead resting in such a beautiful casket?"

The minister cut short the further appeals of the undertaker by a hurried departure, but not before a reproachful glance had convinced him that the latter regarded him as a very unaccommodating person indeed.—Boston Herald.

She Was Kinder Than Her Kind.

The landlady of the boarding house had let him come in to the kitchen table, and she had set before him a piece of beef and a pitcher of water. He was pretty hungry and went for the beef vigorously, but it resisted all his efforts. After wrestling with it in vain he laid down his knife and fork and poured out a glass of water, which he proceeded to sip slowly. The lady watched him for several minutes.

"Aren't you hungry?" she said kindly.

"Yes'm," he replied meekly.

"Then why don't you eat that beef?"

"You will excuse me, mum," he said in a helpless tone, "but really I am too weak to do any hard work, and I thought maybe I might get enough nourishment and strength out of this water to tackle the beef when I got rested."

Some landladies would have whacked him with a broom handle, but this one didn't; she gave him a plate of cold hash and a spoon.—Detroit Free Press.

A Plea for Generosity.

An old servant stepped in and laid on the counter a prescription for a mixture containing two designations of morphia. The chemist weighed the dangerous medication with the utmost care.

"What a shame!" then said the old woman, nudging his elbow. "Don't be so near; it is for an orphan girl!"—Siecle.

THE STORY OF A GRIP.

It Occupied the Only Vacant Seat in a Car and Certainly Was Not Entitled to It.

So the Passenger Who Wanted to Sit Down Threw it Violently Against the Car Door.

He Felt Sorry He Did It When the Owner of the Valise Came From the Smoker.

He got on the back platform of the car next the smoker and walked through looking for a seat, but each one held two people except one, in which a valise sat on the outside half and a man reading a paper next the window. The newcomer noted it as he passed, and finding no other seat he walked slowly back and looked meaningfully at the man by the window.

It was not effective and he passed on to the rear and looked through the next car, but a glance assured him there was no room there, and after a moment's hesitation he squinted his jaw and started up the aisle again, and every one knew he intended to have that seat. He walked up directly beside the reader and then stopped and stared at him. Deep interest displayed in the paper. "Ten seconds' wait and then the man in the aisle remarked, 'That valise is not entitled to a seat,' and he said it so there was no disputing the fact.

The other man did not try to dispute it, he simply glanced up, remarked, 'I know it,' and resumed his reading. A surprised look and ten seconds more. 'Well, sir, are you going to move it?' 'No, no,' with out lifting his eyes from the paper. 'Well, if you don't, I will,' said the stranger, fairly bristling with wrath. No response, and a moment later the valise was grabbed and thrown violently against the front door of the car, where it broke open and scattered things all over the aisle. The reader made no motion, and after standing in a defensive attitude for a moment, the newcomer sat down boldly and tried to look as unconcerned as the other man.

A moment later a man strolled in from the smoker and stumbled over the wrecked valise. He stared for a moment, and then a look of wild wrath came into his eyes. 'Who broke my grip?' he yelled, and then he spied the red faced man in his seat, and in a moment the two were rolling seaward in the aisle, and as they pulled themselves from each other's hair and clothing the wrecked valise had put up the job rose up and quietly stole away to a cooler car.—Washington Post.

More Fun Needed.

Duncan Johnson was greatly shocked and displeased the other afternoon when he called at Parson White's house to find the minister and all his family, including the parson's brother, the professor, flat on their stomachs in the front hall playing marbles. The game was a friendly contest to see who could shoot a marble through a hole cut in a long paper box which was placed against the door.

The deacon was greatly shocked, as has been said, but after he had watched the proceedings for awhile he became perfectly sure that he could shoot a great deal straighter than the parson, and before five minutes he was on his stomach, too, shooting marbles with the rest. The deacon was wise in his second thought. It really pays to be inflexible once in awhile. One great fault of the American people, which has had some distressing consequences, has been this inability to get down and play once in awhile like boys and girls.

It is an art which we are learning slowly from foreign people, and it comes easily enough, if slowly, because the tendency is after all inborn. The Chinese know what they are about when they get out, grow stout and fat, and mandarin and "so-ciety" persons, to fly kites on the public street. Give us more inflexibility like the parson's marble playing in the front hall.—Boston Transcript.

In the Bowels of a Steamship.

Down in the deepest caverns of the ship is the great "stoke hole," where the sixteen boilers generate their steam and the furnaces beneath them belch and seeth with scorching heat. The thermometer registers from 140 to 170, and the men can only work an hour or two at a time; an inexperienced man would faint of exhaustion before his first watch was over. The stoke bars which puncture and shove the molten masses in the furnaces blister the hands that hold them, and curling gaseous flames sear the half naked bodies of the firemen and parch their eyes and crack their lips; ashes and soot and sand and ashes are everywhere. Each projecting ledge is laden with them, and on the dripping bodies of the firemen they mingle in streaks of grimey paste that make these grimy, panting men look even more ghastly than they are.

The coal trimmers, as they trundle their iron barrows from the bunkers in calm weather or stagger under heavy loaded baskets when the ship is storm tossed, are transformed by this flying dust into imps of blackness, and the long time of open, glowing furnaces makes this awful place seem more terrible than Dore's pictures of the sinner's hell.—New York Press.

Behaviors of the Kodak Addict.

"Talk about all the lies told about fish and fishing," said a friend of mine who knows what he is talking about, "the biggest fish liar is the Kodak. If you get a picture of the fisherman and his fish you've got the combination. Just lie down with your feet toward the camera and have a photograph taken of yourself and you'll understand. Your feet will appear bigger and longer than your body."

"When the fish liar was corroborated, and he always does want it, he hangs up his fish a little to one side and in front of him. The Kodak does the rest. I've seen a five pound fish look four feet long and like it ought to weigh at least fifty pounds, all by the artistic accuracy of the Kodak. To make a fish look large all you have to do is to get it in the foreground of the object with which the eye makes a comparison. Oh, I tell you the Kodak knows its business when it goes fishing."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Rigid Dutch Law.

More than 300 years ago the Dutch rulers of Ceylon, anxious to retain their monopoly of the precious spice for which that island is famous, enacted a law which made it a capital offense to lay or sell the wild jungle cinnamon, then the only sort known. The plants, wherever found, were held to be the property of the state. If a shrub chanced to spring up in a man's dooryard he could neither destroy nor use it under severe penalties. Things are happily different now.—Youth's Companion.

LIGHT AND AIRY.

Wishin' Time

The days are gettin' hazy with the smoke o' forest fires, An they're warm as well as lazy—for the mock-in-bird perspires A-singin' in the blossoms—how they strain their tender throats, An the hot sun shinin' on 'em, makes 'em give us mellow notes!

It's jes' the time for dreamin' of the cool and shady nooks, For readin' up your breeches for a splash into the brooks; It's wishin' time, it's fishin' time—it's time to take your ease, Where the loudest sings soprano to the tenor of the bees!

O writer, leave your inkstand, an' your drowsy, crossy desk, An get out into the country, where the world is picturesque! O man, dead set for money! O toiler in the strife! Slip off an' get some honey that will sweeten up your life! —Atlanta Constitution.

His Idea.

A Washington man has a bright young son who succeeded recently in getting even with his father in a very telling though unconscious manner. His father was reproving the little fellow's table manners. "Don't do that," said he, "or we'll have to call you a little pig." The warning seemed to be lost, for the fault was repeated. "Do you know what a pig is?" was the inquiry, put in a solemn manner. "Yes, sir," "What is it?" "A pig is a hog's little boy." The lesson in etiquette was suspended.—Washington Star.

Take Care of Yourself

Young man, be warned in time, And do not put away that overcoat. Even in the keeping of thy maid, What signifies a springlike day in May? 'Tis but a weather's truce, At a time when thou art not expected to be cold, Fresh from Winnipeg and Minneapolis, Will come perchance, and find thee unprepared.

Thy overcoat is good, the pawn check safe Within some pocket of that overcoat. Then left at home, a dozen miles away, Thy heavy undergarments in the wash, And there thou art, blue as steel and shivering, Like some poor lamb to whom the wind has not been tempered, while above the roaring blast Thy knocking knees and thy clattering teeth Are heard, and through thy pale and numbed face The wild and mournful requiem doth howl. Oh, lad, youth, the voice of wisdom heed, And hang on to that summer overcoat! —Chicago Tribune.

In the Cause of Science.

"We have called," said the chairman of the subscription committee, "to solicit your aid in behalf of the widow of a poor man who lost his life in the cause of science." "Why, certainly," answered Professor Patterly, exploring his pockets. "Here is $5.54, all I have at present. By the way what branch of science did the gentleman pursue?" "The science of self defense," answered the chairman as he pocketed the money. "He was killed in the ring."—Indianapolis Journal.

Spring Fever.

Said wife to husband, tears in eyes, "Our Johnnie's got again, That awful tired feeling which Last spring made him complain, So I have granted his request To stay at home from school and rest."

And Johnnie didn't go to school That day, but tramped instead Just seven miles to Fisher's creek, "Whipped" it from month to head, Chubb'd every tree that met his sight, And trudged back home again at night. —Boston Courier.

The Essential Point.

At a Summer Hotel.

Roll on, then blue, infinite ocean, And whiten the rocks with thy spray: We view thee with varied emotion, And the view costs six dollars a day! —Atlanta Constitution.

A Long Wait.

The Big Sister's Intended—Johnny, why do you hang around here so long? Johnny—I've waitin' to hear 'um jeweler whittle. Papa thaid he'd a white little for lilt' pay for thid'le's 'gagement wing. —Harvard Lampoon.

U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, DULUTH, MINN., May 27.—Generally fair weather prevails this morning, and the cloudy conditions which have prevailed in this section for the past few days have moved to the lower lakes.An area of very low pressure is now over the extreme Northwest moving east and will cause a change in the wind to from south to west some time today, and there is also a probability of thunder storms both today and tomorrow, but no reliable forecast.The temperature has risen from 62 to 70 in the Northwest and fallen from 25 to 10° over the Ohio valley and Lake region.Duluth, May 27.—Local forecast for Duluth until 8 p. m., May 28: Fair; warmer; probably followed by thunder storms.B. H. BRONSON,

GRAVES FOR CONGRESS.

The Republicans of St. Louis county will next week select their candidate for the nomination for congress in the Sixth district. The Herald is a Duluth paper and in politics, as in all other matters, it is anxious to see everything done which will further the interests of Duluth. It is anxious to see a Duluth man elected to congress, whose character and ability will be a guarantee that the interests of the Sixth district, and of Duluth in particular, will receive the close attention they require and who will, at the same time be a representative of whom the district can feel proud. With this idea in view, therefore, it is desirous that the candidates who are to be placed in the field by both the Republican and Democratic parties shall be men who possess these essential requirements.

The Republicans of St. Louis county have it in their power, in their primaries and convention next week, to set a good example in this respect. If they shall then present to the Republicans of the district a candidate of character, ability and legislative experience and shall be able to secure his nomination in the district convention, they will force the Democrats to nominate a man of equal standing, and in that event the district will be worthily and ably represented, whether it goes Republican or Democratic. Will the Republicans of St. Louis county rise to the demands of the occasion? In view of the widespread interest which has been aroused during the past week in this contest among the representative Republicans of the city and county, The Herald believes that they will not throw away the opportunity now presented.

There will be two tickets in the field at the primary caucuses—one containing the names of delegates favorable to the nomination of Col. Charles H. Graves, and the other, in favor of Howard C. Kendall. The Herald will not make any invidious comparisons, when expressing its preference between the two candidates, because the people of St. Louis county are as well acquainted as is The Herald with the character, ability and legislative experience of each of these gentlemen. Both have held legislative and other offices of public trust, and it is for the Republican voters to say at the caucuses on Thursday evening which one they consider has the more faithfully and ably represented the interests of this section of the state and which is the one whose record indicates that his course in congress would be such as to redound to the credit and benefit of Duluth.

The Herald has no hesitancy in saying that it believes that Col. Graves would make the best congressman. His record is clean and his reputation is above reproach. During his long residence in Duluth, he has ever been a loyal and true citizen, and has had much to do with furthering the city's progress. His qualifications for congressional work have long been recognized, and if he has not heretofore occupied a seat in the house of representatives it is because it was impossible under the old apportionment of the state to elect any Duluth man to that position. Col. Graves is the logical candidate of the St. Louis county Republicans. As far back as 1871 his friends and neighbors, recognizing his ability for public work, sent him to Washington to help secure the first appropriation for improving the harbor of Duluth, and he has been in Washington during nearly every session since that year laboring on behalf of appropriations for our harbor. He has done this generously and freely at considerable expense to himself, through his enthusiastic regard for the interests of the city, content with the approval and thanks of his fellow citizens. During many years past he has been congressman ex-officio, so far as Duluth is concerned, and it is but right and proper that he should now be rewarded by being made a congressman de facto.

Col. Graves is probably better known throughout the state than any other public man in Duluth, the part which he took in the legislature, both in the house and in the senate, and later as speaker of the house in 1888, having brought him into special prominence. He was recognized in the legislature as an accomplished parliamentarian and a keen and ready debater, and the legislative ability which he there displayed is sufficient guarantee that he would speedily obtain respect and influence in the national congress. For these reasons, among others which will readily suggest themselves to all acquainted with the situation, The Herald believes that the Republicans of St. Louis county owe it as a duty to the county as well as to the party to which they belong to select Col. Graves as their standard-bearer in this campaign.

ATTORNEY ALLEN AGAIN.

Another communication from Attorney S. D. Allen, of the Red Lake Falls road, criticizing the council for passing the Duluth & Northeastern ordinance appears in this issue. Mr. Allen still pretends to be very indignant about what he calls the haste of the council in passing this ordinance and vehemently condemns the mayor because he signed it on the night of its passage by the council, without allowing the people an opportunity to investigate its effect. Mr. Allen's suddenly acquired regard for the desires of the people is really touching, when placed in contrast with his attitude regarding the Red Lake Falls ordinance. He was not so anxious then to give the dear public a chance to investigate. He did not even want the aldermen to devote a little time to its consideration, but on the contrary he made the most strenuous efforts to rush it through the council without barely giving the aldermen a chance to read it. It was Attorney Allen, if we mistake not, who asserted that to postpone action upon the Red Lake Falls ordinance for but one week would kill the scheme. Where then was his loudly-avaunted solicitude for the public? Mr. Allen must think the people have but poor memories, if he imagines that they do not see the marked contrast between Attorney Allen, with the retainer of the Red Lake Falls company jingling in his pocket, and Citizen Allen who has no pecuniary interest in an enterprise that is as superior to the Red Lake Falls scheme as a great transcontinental line is to a logging road.

WHERE DOES IT STAND?

Where does the News, that great organ of Republicanism, stand in the pending congressional contest? Surely the vested proprietor is not wobbling on the fence, fearful to flop on either side? All who know the courageous and independent manner in which he tackles all local subjects will hardly believe that he is afraid to declare himself on this important question. Perhaps he does not know that the Republicans of Duluth are waiting with bated breath to discover what position the News is going to take, or he would not keep them in such terrible suspense. The Herald offers them some friendly and disinterested advice today, but there are a few rock-ribbed and dyed-in-the-wool old Republicans in Duluth who always follow the lead of the party organs, and how are they to act unless the News drops from the fence and tells them what to do?

There is the Tribune, which also claims to be the only simon-pure Republican organ in Duluth. It has taken a definite stand, and following the illustrious example of Col. Elliott F. Shepard, of the New York Mail and Express, who daily places above his editorial columns an appropriate verse of scripture, it has topped its second page with "words of wisdom" from the mouth of the Hon. Guilford G. Hartley, who has been regarded as a guide, philosopher and friend to the vested proprietor of the News.

It is not fair to the party which it claims to represent, that the News should keep quiet at this time, and The Herald trusts that it will at once relieve the intense feeling of anxiety and perplexity which its strange silence has caused in the breasts of many members of the Republican party.

The Minnesota delegation to the Minneapolis convention will not vote as a unit. Senator Daugherty is a Harrison man first, last and all the time. Stanford Newell is said to favor Sherman. It is not known how Governor Pillsbury will vote. Senator Frank A. Day, the other delegate-at-large, says:

"I shall vote for Blaine, providing he does not again state that he will not accept. After that my vote shall be guided by the wish of the New York delegation."

FEATURES FOR SATURDAY.

Tomorrow's edition of The Herald will be up to the high standard set by previous issues. There will not be a dull line in it from start to finish. Every reader will find in it something to interest, something to instruct, and something to amuse. The Herald follows no beaten paths. It does not stay in a rut but it is ever on the look-out for new features, and its Saturday edition is always a happy illustration of its success in that direction. It will contain many interesting features not to be found in any other paper at the head of Lake Superior. Among them may be mentioned the following:

"Memorial Day"—An entertaining article by Junius Henri Browne on the great holiday when a grateful nation places the garland of affection upon the tombs of its dead heroes.

Bill Nye's Letter—The most original of living humorists, whose peculiar humor never fails to excite the risibilities of his readers, will be represented by an amusing account of his experiences in well digging in North Carolina, which he concludes is still in its infancy. The Herald has secured the sole right to these letters for this section of the country.

"A Spirited Protest"—A reply by Florence Finch-Kelly to chronic grumblers about woman's dress; an article which will be read with interest by every lady in Duluth.

News of the Stage—Something about the coming attractions at Duluth theaters, with interesting gossip.

"Pictures of Lincoln"—The new work of Col. A. K. McClure, of the Philadelphia Times, containing many facts about Abraham Lincoln and his administration. A glance at the contents of the June magazines.

The Torrens System—Views of leading citizens of Duluth on the Torrens system of registering land titles, a subject of deep interest to every property owner.

The Congressional Situation—Latest phases of the Republican contest in St. Louis county.

The above are a few of the many bright features which will fill tomorrow's issue, in addition to all the latest local and telegraphic news, in the presentation of which The Herald always leads all would-be competitors.

The Chicago News says there is a widespread belief that the Vanderbilt interests and the railway interests generally are anxious to see Mr. Cleveland nominated and look with apprehension on any attempt to nominate a candidate for president from the West. But there is probably no good reason for such a belief.

It is again asserted that the leaders of Tammany Hall are seriously considering the question of deserting Hill in the interest of Cleveland's candidacy. The desertion of Tammany would mean the final collapse of the Hill boom.

The war department has given Lieut. Totten leave of absence for six months. Why not make it indefinite?

Advertisers should remember to send in their copy early for the Saturday edition of The Herald.

The Northeastern Ordinance.

To the Editor of The Herald:

The interview with me published yesterday took place Tuesday morning and was intended for publication Tuesday. You held it until the following day, thus making me condemn Mayor d'Auremont for signing the ordinance twenty-four hours after its passage. I condemn him because he signed the ordinance the very night of its passage, though asked to hold it until the people could investigate the effect of the sweeping changes that had been made in it at the executive session Monday afternoon. I re-assert that the statements made by me are borne out by facts, notwithstanding the specious denials of your editorial.

In your editorial you charge that I secured the approval of the Red Lake Falls ordinance the night of its passage, that I secured its publication the following day, and that on the train to St. Paul I told how cleverly I had outwitted those desiring an injunction. Each of these statements are wholly and completely false. I left the council chamber immediately upon the passage of the ordinance. I did not request the mayor to sign it. I did not know that it had been signed or was being published or that injunction proceedings were pending until so informed the following day at or near St. Paul by Alderman Weiss. Is not this true, Alderman Weiss? Yours Respectfully,

AMUSEMENTS.

Hallen and Hart.

At the Temple tomorrow night Hallen and Hart, two of the most successful of all those who have devoted talents purely to farce comedy, will present their new version of the famous skit, "Later On." These capable fun-makers are now so well known and liked that no special mention is necessary to attract general interest. Aside from their own individual merits they have always surrounded themselves with the cleverest of performers and singers, with the result of an entertainment that has stood out among the rest of its class with singular virtues and success.

This year they have added to the many bright musical numbers and humorous incidents of the variegated piece of last year with a view of making an even greater success of the firm name in their cherished skit "Later On." The company numbers twenty-two people, all of whom are active members, and who can sing, dance and entertain.

"Spider and Fly."
The Minneapolis Journal says of the "Spider and Fly" which will be at the Temple Monday night.

"Spider and Fly" drew one of the largest Monday night audiences of the season at the Bijou last evening. This attraction presents a combination of spectacle, pantomime, burlesque and comedy, and offers many attractive and interesting features. The musical portion of the entertainment is especially brilliant, the singing of Miss Lou Royce being of an admirable order. Chas. Kenney, the comedian of the organization, is one of the funniest of that kind of players that has been here seen this season. The specialty portion of the entertainment is strong and varied. Letta, the equilibrist, offers one of the most marvelous exhibitions of strength ever witnessed in this city.

NOTICE
To Build Sidewalks.

In accordance with a resolution of the common council of the city of Duluth, passed May 26, 1892, notice is hereby given to all owners and occupants of any and all lots or parcels of land adjoining the south side of Seventh street, between Ninth avenue east, and Tenth avenue east, to construct a sidewalk in said street, adjoining their several lots at their own proper expense, before June 10, 1892. Said sidewalk to be constructed in accordance with plans and specifications on file in the office of the board of public works, and to be built to the established line and grade, or to a temporary line and grade to be given by the city engineer.

If the said owners or occupants fail to construct said sidewalk before June 10, 1892, or if any such work or part thereof is not done in the manner prescribed by said plans and specifications, or if said sidewalk is not built to the line and grade prescribed, then the board of public works of the city of Duluth will cause the same to be done, and the full cost and expense thereof, together with ten (10) per cent additional for cost of surveys, plans and superintendence, will be assessed against said lots.

FIBS BY SALES WOMEN.

Girl Employed in Large Store Says That Fluent Fribbing is Essential to Successful Selling.

Some Specimens of the Manner in Which Saleswomen Have to Meet the Whims of Customers.

Woolen Dresses Are Unfit for Domestic Work Because They Carry the Odors of the Kitchen.

"How can a girl be truthful and become a clever saleswoman?" This is the actual remark of a girl employed in one of our large stores, and an hour spent in her special department revealed that fluent fibbing was an essential element in her line of business at least. The first customer was an elderly lady with a penchant for gay colors altogether unsuited to her years. A black bonnet being produced she sniffed audibly and remarked:

"That! Oh, my, you don't suppose I want to look like my own grandmother?"

"Certainly not, madam. That was an order for a customer. I have not looked for yours yet." Ah, the ready little fibber. "Is more ribbon fashionable?" goes on the aged customer.

"Yes, indeed, quite the newest thing." The hat is sold and buyer No. 2 comes in. "I want a bonnet trimmed with satin ribbon—no more mind; that is altogether too much behind the times."

"Quite right, madam. We do not use more at all on our newest hats."

"Do you think this is becoming?" with an anxious glance in the mirror opposite that reflects the most outrageously inharmonious getup imaginable.

"Yes, indeed; it is just your color, and those tips are awfully stylish; don't you think so?" appealing to the writer, who is put to utter confusion by this sudden question, and, like the man of the story, has no lie ready.

"I am sure you will like it; if it doesn't suit bring it right back, for it is one of our best selling styles, and we will have no trouble to get rid of it."

That settles it; if others are anxious for it it must be desirable, and away she goes with a bonnet perfectly satisfied, whereas the salesgirl gives a sigh of relief. "We have tried for weeks to sell that fright, and now, thank heaven, it is gone!"

In the next twenty minutes she told just as many fibs as there were minutes, yet she is one of the best and most honest little creatures in the world, and would revolt in holy horror from a lie on any other subject, but considers in business everything fair and square, and fribbles in the interest of her employer. It's only a bit of character, after all, and to be met with every day.—Philadelphia Times.

Kitchen Odors and Woolen Dresses.

It took me a long time to learn that woolen dresses were entirely unfit for domestic work, and although I rarely do much cooking or work about the kitchen, I always wear cotton dresses in the early part of the day. I got my lesson on that one day when I first went to housekeeping. I had a pretty nice velvet dress, with velvet trimmings, and I was very fond of wearing it. It was past its best use, and I thought it would make an admirable house dress, so I put it on and one day the servants left and I had to put the house in order and get luncheon. When my many duties were done I had an errand a little way over town, and thought I wouldn't take the trouble to change my dress. So I put on my ulster and cap and started out. I got into a warm street car and sat down near the stove, as I felt somewhat chilly. Five minutes later two ladies came into the car and sat down near me.

I paid very little attention to their conversation until one said to the other in an undertone, "Dear me, somebody has been frying cutlets, for I can smell them." And her companion gave her a little push, and whispered: "Hush! She'll hear you!" It hadn't occurred to me before, but I now noticed that I carried on that wool dress the odor of the kitchen and the identical smell of cutlets of which my neighbor had spoken. I have frequently observed since that I could tell almost infallibly what many people had cooked for breakfast by the odors which clung to their garments as they came into the street car with a woolen dress on, and could readily tell if it had been worn during the performance of any culinary duty.

Indeed, we had quite a bit of a joke about it, and several of us used to amuse ourselves, when we went out in the morning, with trying to decide what our neighbors had breakfasted upon, and it isn't at all difficult to discover. Just take a little pains, cultivate the sense of smell, and it is easy to get a comfortably correct idea of the bills of fare of persons with whom you come in contact.—Interview in New York Press.

Neatness and order in your pantry will depend in great measure upon the way you clear your table. If you look upon your butler's pantry as a dumping ground, then dirt and disorder will be inevitable. But, on the contrary, if you consider it a workshop to be kept shipshape you will avoid these dangers. Shipshape means a place for everything and everything in its right place.

Make up your mind in the beginning where you want to lay your knives, where you want your silver, which is the best place for your heavier china and the safest for your delicate pieces. When these places are well chosen then stick to them.

You must be sure to have a bowl or pan large enough to hold all the broken bits and bones from any meal. A large yellow bowl or agate pan is suitable for this. Do not use a tin pail; it is not cleanly.

Do not begin your work until the food is put away. Next empty every glass, cup, bowl and pitcher. Rinse with cold water those which have been used for milk or cream. Scrape your plates and dishes carefully and put those of one sort together. This saves time. A crust of bread from the broken bits will easily wipe out a fine china bowl or silver ladle without scratching it as a knife or spoon might do. Keep a pan and brush at hand, and if food is dropped on your pantry floor take it up at once. Then you will have one greasy spot instead of long streaks to scour out. Never leave soiled towels lying in your pantry. After each meal wash out those you have used and hang them to dry.

Your pantry shelves should be kept well dusted, every drawer clean and in order, the knife cleaner in proper place, the silver cleaning materials in their place. See that the clean hand towels are not mixed with the dish towels.—Good Housekeeping.

In a book which gives a life of Chinese women of 2,000 years ago, the first thing taught was that a wife should "reverence her husband as heaven." If his life is in danger she must not hesitate to die for him.

In the Faroe islands it is believed that on every ninth night the seals cast off their skins, assume human forms and dance on the beach. But if they lose their sealskins in any way they cannot resume the shapes of seals.

IT MAKES PEOPLE WELL.

Best Spring Remedy in the World—It is Not a Patent Nostrum.

There is one true specific for diseases arising from a debilitated nervous system, and that is Paine's celery compound, so generally prescribed by physicians. It is probably the most remarkable remedy that the scientific research of this country has produced.

Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., of Dartmouth College, first prescribed what is known the world over as Paine's celery compound, a positive cure for dyspepsia, biliousness, liver complaint, neuralgia, rheumatism, and kidney troubles. For the latter, Paine's celery compound has succeeded again and again where everything else has failed.

Washington correspondents have recently given it a great deal of attention since the most wonderful cure effected in the case of Commodore Howell.

The medical journals of the country have given more space in the last few years to the many remarkable cases where the use of Paine's celery compound has made people well than to any other one subject.

ARMSTRONG DECORATIVE COMPANY, Rooms 302, 303 Pastore Block.

Logs Coming In.

The tug H. B. Abbott brought in the first raft of logs today which has come through the canal. They were taken to the Hubbard & Vincent mill and will be sawed for Bradley & Hanford. It was difficult to get through the canal owing to the strong current which is running out. The Cranberry Lumber company has a raft at the natural entry and will bring it through today.

FATHER CONNELLY HERE

He Arrived in Duluth Yesterday and Will Remain Pending the Result of the Investigation.

His Case is in the Hands of the Ecclesiastical Court and Will be Sifted to the Bottom.

An Agent is Now in Crookston Taking Sworn Depositions From all Parties Interested.

The fact that grave charges have been made affecting the standing of Rev. Father Connelly as a Catholic priest and as a man is no secret and the accused is now in the city, having arrived here from Crookston yesterday. The affair is said to have happened in Crookston where Father Connelly has lately been stationed. H. A. Mason, of that city, claims to have found both his wife and the priest in an intoxicated condition in the priest's residence and that when he sought to induce his wife to return home that the priest would not allow her to go. The charges were so serious that as soon as they reached the ears of Bishop McGillick the alleged offending priest was immediately suspended from the duties of his office, and ordered to the city of the diocese, pending the investigation which was at once commenced and in compliance Father Connelly arrived here yesterday. A Herald reporter called at the episcopal residence and was cordially received. The bishop was engaged but Father Corbett spoke for him and in substance said: "Of the truth or falsehood of the statements made affecting Father Connelly the church knows nothing as yet. The matter is in the hands of the ecclesiastical court and will be sifted to the very dregs. No attempt will be made to cover up guilt, if any guilt exists, and in the meantime Father Connelly has been suspended from performing any of the offices of his calling. If he is guilty he will be punished far more severely than he would be at the hands of any lay court, and if he is innocent the fact will be made known. If there ever was a strictly total abstinence house this is one, and it is absolutely certain that no one ever received any wine here, neither the priests, or the bishops, or even the pope, should be by any chance come here. The only wine in the house is for sacramental purposes. The charges against Father Connelly came so suddenly that it was like a blow, but they will be probed to the bottom."

PROMISED SENSATION.

Something Will Drop Soon at the Land Office.

About next Tuesday an official axe will fall in the vicinity of the United States' land office and the heads of some ten or a dozen special agents will drop from the government pay rolls with a very pronounced "plunk." These agents have been busily engaged in complicating matters and have been instrumental in doing very little good, hence the decapitation. Maj. Ralph Ballin is not in any way included in the list. He is at Washington reviewing his work on the Fond du Lac reservation before the department officers, where he is in high favor.

A Shoplifter Apprehended.

For some time I. Freimuth has missed articles from his store and could not explain their disappearance. He placed Detective Benson at work and yesterday he searched the house of Mrs. August Huard, 123 First avenue west, upon whom he had fastened suspicion and found a large quantity of dry goods. She protested her innocence at first but afterward confessed and gave up some of the goods. She has not yet been arrested.

A Handsome Gift.

Palestine lodge, No. 70, A. F. & A. M., received today the elegant stereopticon lantern, recently presented to them. It is one of the finest made and was accompanied by a large number of slides and full paraphernalia for operating it. On the front of the lantern is a silver plate bearing the following inscription: "Presented to Palestine lodge, No. 70, A. F. & A. M., by Bros. Benj. F. John G. and Julius D. Howard, in memory of their father, Bro. John D. Howard, born Sept. 14, 1813; died Sept. 26, 1891."

Wedding and Runaway.

L. Lightfoot and Miss Cassie Hanon, both of Carlton, were married there Wednesday night, Rev. Dr. Forbes, of Minneapolis, performing the ceremony. While returning to Croquet from the wedding, a party of six met with a serious accident. The team ran away, overturning the carriage, breaking Miss Larson's arm in two places, and breaking the shoulder blade of Miss Maude Hall. The others escaped without serious injury.

Fire Tug Test.

The fire department and fire commissioners were notified yesterday that the big fire pump on tug Joe D. Dudley, of the Inman line, was ready to respond to any calls. A public test and an official one will be given in a few days, at which the city officials and all interested are invited to be present. The date will be made public when it is determined upon.

The annual election of officers of Duluth lodge, O. O. F., will be held this evening in Odd Fellows hall on Lake avenue.

A "Y" souvenir is to be given this evening at the Christian church and a program will be given together with the serving of refreshments.

The Tilden Democratic club did not meet last evening because of the small attendance and adjourned until Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Davidstad, a woman from Iceland, who had but very little idea of where she was bound was taken care of by the Union depot people yesterday. They found she was destined for Ely and she left for that place today.

A public test of Labby & Sansoucy's fire escape will be tried at the front of the chamber of commerce tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The invention is entirely new and the exhibition will be interesting.

Rev. Dr. J. N. Hamilton, of Boston, on his way from the general conference which has just closed its session at Omaha, will occupy the pulpit of the First Methodist church, this city, next Sunday.

A fine program has been arranged for the Norwegian Lutheran festival tomorrow evening at the corner of Seventh street and Ninth avenue east. A quartet will sing several songs, John Selbee will play a few organ solos, and Rev. G. T. Lee will speak.

DULL BUT STEADY.

There Was a Slight Rise in Wheat on the Duluth Board.

Flat cables and fine weather reports caused a weaker opening this morning, but the market ruled steady and dull during the early hours. There was a good demand for the milling grades of wheat, but the futures were dull with no outside demand. The exports by lake this week show a large falling off, but railroad shipments are very large, indicating the great demand for milling wheat at interior points. There was little news of a decisive nature either for the bullish or bearish side of the market. The market ruled steady but dull, with a slight gain in the afternoon, and the close was ¼¢ higher all round, except track wheat, which was ¼¢ off. Following were the closing prices:

No. 1 hard—Cash 86½¢, May 86½¢, June 86½¢, July 87¢, No. 1 northern—Cash 83½¢, May 83½¢, June 84¢, July 84½¢. No. 2 northern—Cash 77¢, No. 3, 72½¢, Rejected 65¢. On track—No. 1 hard 85½¢, No. 1 northern 84¢.

Car inspection today, 46. Receipts—Wheat, 19,802 qrs. Shipments—Wheat, 19,320 qrs. Cars on track, 35; last year 51. There will not be any session of the Duluth board on Saturday and Monday.

Outside Markets.

CHICAGO, May 27.—The close: Wheat: May, 83½¢; July, 82½¢; September, 82½¢. Corn, May, 70¢; July, 45½¢; September, 44½¢. Oats: May, 31½¢; July, 30½¢; September, 30½¢. Pork: July, $10.35; September, $10.47½¢. Lard: July, $6.40; September, $6.55; Ribs: July, $6.22½¢; September, $6.32½¢.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 27.—Wheat: May closed at 86½¢; July opened at 81½¢ and closed at 81½¢; September closed at 79½¢. On track—No. 1 hard 83½¢; No. 1 northern 82½¢; No. 2 northern, 79¢ 81c.

Highland Park Case.

The case of J. W. Bull vs. C. E. Dickerman et al., is on trial today in the United States court. This affects the title to Highland Park property and is an important action. Judgment for $1000 has been entered by stipulation in the case of Herman Johnson, administrator of the estate of John Hagola, deceased, against the Chandler Iron company.

Two Accidents.

The ambulance was called to the Union depot this noon to meet the Iron Range train. Mate Driscoll of the barge V. H. Ketchum while loading ore at Two Harbors last Tuesday, fell into the hold of the vessel breaking one of his legs and bruising the other. He was brought here for treatment. A laborer was severely bruised at the excavation for the Torrey block this morning by a stone falling on him.

TORNADO'S FURY.

Terrible Destruction Wrought at Wellington, Kans., by a Tornado of Frightful Force.

Wreck and Ruin Stretches From One End of the City to the Other.

Over One Hundred and Fifty People Injured and About Thirty Are Dead.

The Towns of Argonia and Harper Were Totally Destroyed by the Awful Storm.

WELLINGTON, Kan., May 28.—The full extent of the damage wrought by the tornado last night was realized this morning when daylight came to disperse the gloom which surrounded the awful calamity. Wreck and ruin stretches from one end of the city to the other.
Washington avenue, the finest thoroughfare in the city, was swept from one end to the other by the storm and the big business blocks and fine hotels, with the churches and school buildings, are now lying torn and dismantled. The newspaper offices are utterly ruined and the hotels are gone.

The Phillips house was directly in the path of the tornado and received the full force of the dreadful wind. It appear to have been crushed to the earth as if with some mighty force expended from above downward. The walls were literally crushed in and the unfortunate inmates could not have had time to move after the tornado struck the house.
Even at this hour, 9 a. m., it is impossible to get even a partially correct list of the dead, for everything is in such confusion that while one minute a person is reported as dead, the next finds that person searching for someone else as dead.

There are twelve dead bodies lying in different parts of the city but the reports as to their identity make it impossible to give names. In many cases those who were taken from the ruins were so disfigured it is almost impossible to identify them except by the clothing, and this will take time until the people have become calm. It is estimated this morning that there are over 150 people badly injured, and the death list will undoubtedly reach thirty in the city, while reports from the immediate surrounding country will probably swell that to forty.
From the wrecked condition of the houses it is believed that this is the worst storm that has ever visited Kansas. One hundred and fifty-two houses are to be counted as having fallen to the force of the tornado and of these fully 100 are completely wrecked.

The following dead have been identified: Mrs. Wm. S. Asher, Kitty Strahn, X. Silva, Walter Forsythe, Ida Jones,
Frank D. Campbell, James Hastie, Leonard Adamson, Frances Myer, Hart Upson, William French Sims. The injured: Mrs. Murphy, may die; a child named Hodges, may die; Charles Stoner, Guy Colby, Dick Weaver, Carrie
Mitchell, E. J. Fortsche, all seriously.
Five of these were taken from the ruins of the Phillips house, a three-story hotel, of which all that is standing is a portion of the third story which now occupies the place vacated by the ground floor.
More bodies may be found in these ruins.
Mrs. S. A. Shere, a bride of three months, and her sister were in a room together in the third story of a brick which was completely demolished and the ruins of which caught fire. When the bodies were found they were clasped together in a vice-like grip and were both horribly burned.

The tornado did little damage till it reached the center of the town. The Lutheran church first went down before its fury and next came the Presbyterian church. The most furious work was done within a radius of four squares about the business portion of the city.
Every building within this space,
whether brick, stone, or wood, was razed to the ground. Fortunately these were not business buildings or the sacrifice of human life must have been horrible.
The court house, First National bank,
a carriage factory, a fine school house were among the more costly buildings completely demolished. The losses in property will foot up $700,000.

The town of Harper, about twelve miles miles from Wellington, was visited about the same hour as the county seat.
Five or six lives are known to have been lost, though the names of only three are given. These are W. L. Strouhoun, C.
Mallory and child. It is said that nearly every house in the town was shifted from its foundation and it is remarkable in view of the great destruction to property in both places how few deaths were caused.

TWO TOWNS DESTROYED.

Argonia and Harper Both Wiped Out of Existence.

KANSAS CITY, May 28.—Dispatches received at the Santa Fe headquarters at Topeka from trainmen on the road, say that the town of Argonia, of 150 inhabitants, and Harper, the county seat of Harper county, 2300 inhabitants, have been totally destroyed by the tornado, which worked such havoc at Wellington. It is impossible to get news from these places, as all the wires are gone.

Telegraph service at Wellington is so badly delayed that it is almost impossible to get any message through. At 12:30 this afternoon a heavy hail and rain storm passed over the section north of Kansas City, but what damage was done is impossible to learn now. The Santa Fe has sent special trains to Argonia and Harper with all the help obtainable at Wichita.

THE CRONIN CASE AGAIN.

Cooney Located and Sensational Developments Promised.

NEW YORK, May 28.—A special to the World from Chicago says: It is said that startling developments are coming in the Cronin case. Cooney, the Fox, has been located and detectives are now on his track. Cooney engaged the rooms in the Carlson cottage and assisted in the butchery. John F. Scanlon said today:

"There will certainly be new developments in the Cronin case. It is inevitable. When it comes it will be all at once and create as great a sensation almost as did the famous murder. I have always been confident that the entire conspiracy will come out. It has been reported that the Cronin committee is short of funds. The committee has all the funds needed if they are needed. We will act as developments arise. We have made preparations to decorate Dr.
Cronin's grave on Memorial day and some members of the committee will go out to Calvary next Sunday for that pur-

A BRAKEMAN MURDERED.

Shot by a Negro During a Row in Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—C. E. Atwell, a brakeman on the Baltimore & Ohio railway, was shot and killed by an unknown negro at an early hour this morning in the suburbs of the city. The only witness to the tragedy was James Willis, a colored man. He says an altercation occurred between the brakeman and three negroes, one of whom Atwell struck with his lantern.

A pistol shot followed and Atwell fell, expiring without a word. The murderer and his companions escaped. Atwell was 22 years of age and came from Lynchburg.

A MINISTER ELOPED.

A Baptist Parson Skipped With a 17-Year-Old Girl.

RALEIGH, N. C., May 28.—Rev. A. A.
Butler, pastor of the Second Baptist church of Durham, eloped with the 17-year-old daughter of Street Commissioner Christian yesterday morning at 3 o'clock. Rev. Mr. McDuffy assisted in the elopement, and it is thought that he performed the ceremony in another county. The whereabouts of the eloping couple is unknown.

Driven Out of Town.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., May 28.—Jos.
Raymond, of Brockton, Mass., was pelted with eggs and driven out of town last evening by an excited crowd of the best citizens of this place. He was condemning mob law in the state and in connection with it stated there was no virtue in any of the women of this country above 14 years of age. He begged to be allowed to wait for a train, but was not to take the train, which he did in double quick time. Fears were entertained that he would be lynched.

The Methodist Bishops.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 28.—Bishop Fitzgerald returned home last night from the Methodist conference at Omaha, and gives out the changes in bishops, which will not be officially announced for some days. The following are the changes: Bishop Mallalieu, from New Orleans to Buffalo; Bishop Fowler, from San Francisco to Minneapolis; Bishop Fitzgerald, from Minneapolis to New Orleans;
Bishop Nide, to Topeka; Bishop Vincent, to Topeka.

A Gold Discovery.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 28.—There is considerable excitement in Mon-gomery county over the discovery of a very valuable vein of gold ore in the Lost Louisiana mine. The ore assays in the way from $3.50 to $100. Governor Eagle has telegraphed to Prof. Branner, state geologist, now in California, to come at once to Arkansas and make an official examination of the mine.

The Letter Carriers' Pay.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The committee on postoffices and post roads yesterday ordered Mr. Patterson, of Ohio, to report favorably to the house the bill introduced by Mr. Cummings, of New York, to increase and equalize the pay of letter carriers. The bill provides that the pay of letter carriers in free delivery cities for the first year of service shall be $600; for the second year, $700;
for the third year, $800; for the fourth, $1200.

To Be Built This Year.

SIoux CITY, Ia., May 28.—J. E. Devoe has just returned from a conference in New York with the prime movers in the Duluth, Sioux City & Pueblo railroad and he says he received from them positive assurance that the road will this season be built west through Nebraska.

Robbed of $5000.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Samuel Hoover, a well-known business man of this city, was robbed of a negotiable note of $5000 at the Bank of Washington yesterday. He was arranging some papers at the desk, and his attention being called to another part of the room, a strange man took advantage of the opportunity and abstracted the note and disappeared.

Has Become Insane.

NEW YORK, May 28.—William Lewis
Conigan, a brother of Archbishop Cori-gan, was taken to the insane pavilion at Bellevue hospital yesterday. An application will be made for his commitment before one of the judges this morning.

A New Senator.

RICHMOND, Va., May 28.—The governor of this state has just appointed Hon. Ephraim Hunton as United States senator to succeed John S. Barbour, deceased.

Murdered by Indians.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 28.—A Victoria,
B. C., bulletin, just received says word was received there that Dr. Sheldon Jackson and party have been murdered by Yukon Indians.

Bishop O'Reilly Dead.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., 28.—Bishop O'
Reilly died at 2:15 this afternoon.

A DOZEN INJURED.

A Head End Collision of a Panhandle Passenger Train With a Freight Train.

Were Going at the Rate of Fifteen Miles an Hour at the Time.

A Sleepy Operator at a Crossing Gave the Freight Train Right of Way.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 28.—At 3:30 this morning the incoming Panhandle passenger train from Chicago, due at 3:45, met with a head-end collision with a freight train near Howland station, two miles beyond the city limits, and a dozen or more persons were injured, one perhaps fatally. The passenger was coming around the long curve at this point at high speed when the freight was sighted. Both trains sighted each other simultaneously, and when they came together each was going at the rate of fifteen miles per hour. The engines were wrecked.

Most of the passengers were asleep.
The injured are as follows: David Ingler, Indianapolis, freight fireman, back wrenched and internal injuries, perhaps fatally; Conductor Gillis, Indianapolis, of the passenger, badly bruised and sprained; H. C. Perrine, mail clerk, Indianapolis, nose cut and badly bruised; J. H. Golding, Chicago, injured internally; Charles L. Martz, Louisville, face and hands cut. Several others were slightly injured. Ridgeley's injuries were received after the wreck.
The collision awoke him and he frantically broke a window and jumped out.
The cause of the collision is said to be the fact that the operator at the belt railroad crossing had been asleep and, supposing the passenger had gone safely, gave the freight the right-of-way. Several thousand dollars' damage

DEADLY ELECTRIC SHOCK.

Two Men Killed and Several Seriously Injured.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 28.—A Braddock special says: About 5 o'clock this morning two men were killed and several seriously injured at the Edgar Thomson Steel works by a shock from an electric wire in the blacksmith department. The boom of a travelling crane on which the men were working came in contact with an electric light wire and cut through the insulation. In an instant all of the men were knocked insensible.

A panic ensued among the other employees, who rushed from the shop.
Anthony Lokel, aged 24, and Joseph Zealeny, aged 23, died a few minutes after they were removed. A third man, whose name is not known, remains unconscious. The others soon regained consciousness and were recovered. Both of the deceased were unmarried and have no relatives in this country.

GROVER WILL STAY.

Don Dickinson Still Predicts Cleveland's Nomination.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Don M. Dickinson enthusiastically predicts Cleveland's nomination. "When interviewed upon his return to this city as to the truth of the reports about Mr. Cleveland withdrawing from the fight, Mr. Dickinson said with great emphasis that Cleveland would not withdraw under any circumstances unless the people who have demanded his services retire him. While in New York he visited Mr. Cleveland, who, he says, 'is as free from care and as serene as ever.'"

BLAINE WILL ACCEPT.

So Declares His Warm Friend, Representative Milliken.

NEW YORK, May 28.—A special to the Herald from Washington says that Blaine will accept the Republican nomination if tendered to him. The authority for the statement is Representative Milliken, of Maine, one of Mr. Blaine's warmest friends. Mr. Milliken also says that Mr. Blaine will write no more letters relative to the presidency.

New York Weekly Bank Statement.
NEW YORK, May 28.—The weekly statement of the associated banks shows
the following changes:

Reserve, increase.....	$5,006,500
Loans, decrease.....	2,153,102

The banks now hold $24,606,825 in excess of the requirements of the 25 per cent rule.

Died the Same Day.

ST. PAUL, May 28.—Mrs. E. W.
Winter of St. Paul and her mother, Mrs. Laura C. McConnell Cannon of Louisville Ky., both died here this morning. Mrs. Winter was the wife of the general manager of the Omaha road.

A. W. Armour Dies.

KANSAS CITY, May 28.—A. W. Armour, brother of Phil Armour of Chicago, and one of the wealthiest men in this city, died at 11 o'clock this morning at Excelisor Springs of a complication of diseases.

THE TORRENS SYSTEM.

Opinions From Attorneys and Others on the New Australian Plan For the Registration of Titles.

Nearly All Conceded That Some Question Whether it is Practicable in This State.

It Would Necessarily Cause an Entire Revolution in the Present Method of Land Transferring.

The "Torrens system of land registration" is probably the subject which is most interesting abstract of title men, lawyers and real estate men generally at present. It is a reform which is slowly but surely being introduced into this country and like many other reforms is termed an "Australian system." It was originated in Australia about thirty years ago by Sir Robert Torrens, and from him its name is derived. He claims it was first suggested to him by the method in use in transferring vessels. It proved so satisfactory in Australia that it was introduced in Tasmania, New Zealand, and later in British Columbia, Manitoba and Ontario and its use is permitted in England. It is a system of registration of titles by which after the title is once registered it is transferred only on the books of the register in analogy to the transfer of registered bonds and stocks.

The distinguishing feature is that the title is transferred only upon the record on the surrender and cancellation of the certificate of title of the seller and a new certificate is issued to the purchaser. If only a portion of the land is transferred a certificate is issued to the purchaser for the part purchased and a new one to the seller for the part which he retains. Each transfer is under supervision of the registrar and all questions touching its regularity and validity are settled at the time of the transfer, so that no question affecting the title can thereafter arise, except in case of fraud, and then only while the property remains in the hands of the purchaser or others having notice of the fraud.

The fees to be charged for registration and the compensation to any owners who may wrongfully be deprived of their interest in any lands is one of the most important questions. In Australia a charge of about one fifth of 1 per cent of the value of the land is charged and this goes to make up a guaranty fund out of which any loss may be compensated. In Australia in seventeen years the fund has amounted to $200,000 and the total of all claims against it has not exceeded $1500.

At the last session of the legislature an act was passed and approved April 20, 1891, providing for the appointment of a committee of three members to investigate the system in places where it is used and report in detail the workings and as to the advisability of introducing it in Minnesota. This report was ordered to be ready for submission at the opening of the next session, and accompanying it a bill embodying such a system with a view of introducing it in Minnesota. This committee was appointed and has since been investigating the subject. It has already been announced that its report will be favorable and will recommend the adoption of the plan in Minnesota.

Should the legislature adopt the system there would be a commission of examiners of titles appointed there. There might be a commission for the state and perhaps a commission for each county. All owners of lands would then be allowed to send in their applications to have their property placed on the register of titles. If the commission found an applicant's title imperfect notice would be served on all possible claimants and a certain time given them to make good their claims. If they found the title good the land would be brought under the operation of the act by the issue of a certificate of title vesting the land indefeasibly in the applicant. The state then becomes the defender of the title and if any question arises over the title the state must defend the holder of the certificate.

In a report read before the Illinois State Bar association Prof. Harvey B. Hurd, as chairman of the committee on jurisprudence and law reform which investigated the system says:

"The question which every American lawyer asks is how, under our constitution which says 'no person shall be deprived of his property without due process of law,' can this indefeasible title be started. In other words how can a certificate of title be made so conclusive that there is no longer any occasion to look back of it to see if there is not some person other than the one named in it as the owner who has the right to the land. There is no controverting the position that one's rights cannot be taken away by the legislature or by any adjudication of any court, except he is a party to the proceeding and brought within the jurisdiction of the court. Much less can his rights be adjudicated away by a registrar in a proceeding in which he is not even a party. But his rights are constantly being barred, that is to say, by the statutes of limitation. These statutes, so far at least as they affect title to the land, are mostly based on the fact that the records, and are full of exceptions in favor of persons that may or may not exist, and are of little value in marketing a title which is generally judged of only by what appears in the abstract of the record. It is quite as competent for the legislature to enact a statute of limitation based upon a matter appearing upon record, a certificate of title for instance, as upon any other fact, and to make it conclusive, without exception as with exception. The length of time that the fact shall exist is a matter of discretion with the legislature, provided only that a reasonable time is given to the adverse claimant to assert his right."

There is no doubt but that the abstracts of title men will oppose the introduction of the system and many lawyers will also, but their opposition will be because of pecuniary considerations. The honestly expressed opinion of nearly all lawyers who have examined into the system is that it is excellent in theory. It will prevent a great many of the intricate land suits which are constantly being commenced especially if they are for blackmailing purposes as is frequently the case. With the state defending titles blackmailers will be scarce.

A Herald reporter has visited a number of lawyers and endeavored to obtain opinions on the system. A great many, however, have not inquired into the plan and could give no opinion. Most of the abstract men are out of the city and could not be seen, but their views are undoubtedly unfavorable. Some of the opinions are:

Judge Stearns—I believe it is a good thing and I know that we need it. I have seen so much of land litigation and complication of titles that I was convinced long ago that some new system was necessary. The "Torrens system" seems to be a good one and has operated successfully where it is in use.

D. H. Twomey—in my judgment the Torrens system has operated advantageously where it has been tested, to purchasers in that it secures their title absolutely. Anything which will bring about that end is desirable especially in these days when there is so much land litigation.

Charles A. Towne—There is no question but that the Torrens system is destined to reform the system of land conveying. It has been tried and it would give a certainty and safety to purchasers conducive to social order. It would do away with the cases of people who are brought into court to defend their property which they have supposed for years they owned and on which they have made improvements and often have to give up to some fellow who traces back and finds some flaws, the result of carelessness. Under the Torrens system the state defends and when a certificate is once issued the purchaser can rest on that. Each man is in effect the grantee of the state.

J. B. Douglas—The system will operate advantageously in many ways and looking at it from all points I can see every advantage and no disadvantages. There will be a great saving in recording fees, the expense in drawing instruments will be done away with, there will be no abstract fee and no attorney's fees for examination. It gives the purchaser an absolute guaranty of title and to persons to whom he may sell, something which a title insurance policy does not ordinarily do.

Amos Shephard—If the system should be properly established and put in working order it could only work advantageously but the question arises in my mind as to whether it can be done in this country. Take this country, some of the titles are in bad shape and many things are brought up which go behind the records. How is the state to investigate this and would there not be a large number of law suits brought in cases where the title seems to be all right? We have in this country many of these cases. Matters foreign to the records are brought into court and titles which seem to be good are knocked out. The system seems to be good in theory but whether it could be put into successful operation here is another thing. In a new country it would be comparatively easy but in an older community where there have been many transfers it is decidedly different.

J. L. Washburn—I have given some attention to the subject but have not made a thorough study of the system. That there should be an improvement in our methods, both for safety, economy and simplicity, is undoubtedly true. That the Torrens system cannot be put in operation without great change in many things in our methods of business and local government I believe to be true. I have always been afraid the registrar under that system if selected under our form of government. If the system is tried here, there should be thorough and deliberate preparation made for it.

One of the most unique designs of the show window decorator's art is on exhibition in the west window of M. S. Burrows' clothing store. The design is the work of Salesman Goodrich and represents in minute detail the Grant monument recently dedicated in Riverside Park. It is composed almost entirely of clothing and furnishing goods forming a groundwork of white and all heavily draped in black. It is a creative and appropriate object for Memorial day.

MATTERS THEATRICAL.

Farce Comedy at the Temple Tonight, Hallen & Hart, the Eminent Comedians, Appearing in "Later On."

"Spider and Fly," the Burlesque, With a Fund of Novelties and Fresh Faces at the Temple Monday Night.

The Temple Has the Jeannie Winston Opera Company for Five Performances Next Week.

This week has not been a brilliant one theatrically. "Ole Olson" drew an immense house at the Temple Monday night and the show was fairly good, but the engagement of the Georgia minstrels Wednesday night was an unfortunate one. However, they will go out well, Hallen and Hart appear in "Later On" tonight and they are unquestionably two of the brightest comedians on the stage. The Lyceum has been taken by Father Chiniquy four nights of the week and the house was packed each night.

Next week will be a brilliant one at the Temple. Monday night the "Spider and Fly" will appear and it is drawing better than ever this year. The last four days of the week the Jeannie Winston Opera company will be heard. The Lyceum has no attractions for next week except the Y. M. C. A. amateur entertainment.

HALLEN & HART.

These Two Bright Comedians at the Temple Tonight.

Farce comedy companies, as a rule, go on from year to year without much change or improvement in the quality of humor that they present says the Minneapolis Journal. Whether this is because successful fun is difficult to create, or because on account of the indolence of the creators, the fact remains that the average farce-comedy on the road today differs slightly from what it was when first launched into public notice. It gives the purchaser an absolute guaranty of title and to persons to whom he may sell, something which a title insurance policy does not ordinarily do.

Amos Shephard—If the system should be properly established and put in working order it could only work advantageously but the question arises in my mind as to whether it can be done in this country. Take this country, some of the titles are in bad shape and many things are brought up which go behind the records. How is the state to investigate this and would there not be a large number of law suits brought in cases where the title seems to be all right? We have in this country many of these cases. "SPIDER AND THE FLY."

The Famous Spectacular Burlesque at the Temple Monday.

M. B. Leavitt's new spectacular pantomime burlesque, "Spider and Fly," will be presented at the Temple Opera house Monday evening, May 30. This popular attraction is in its third year of prosperity, and unlike the average spectacular show, always presents a fund of novelties, fresh faces, new pantomime tricks, catchy and original music. This season's company was mostly recruited abroad, and embraces the choice of Europe's best clowning, jugglers, burlesquers, jugglers, equilibrist and dancers. Novelties are always in demand, and Mr. Leavitt has certainly secured several strong ones, judging from the favorable comments with which his efforts have met. One of the numerous features of the "Spider and Fly" is the Alhambra ballet, direct from the Alhambra palace, London, headed by the star danseuse Minnie Thurgate and sixteen secundas, introducing the sensational Tarantula and Gavotte dances; also intricate marches, evolutions and grotesques. Miss Minnie Thurgate, the star danseuse of the company, played an engagement of four consecutive years at the Alhambra palace, and during that time introduced sixty-eight different styles of dancing. The scenery, electric and mechanical effects are all new and brilliant; the chorus pretty and well trained. The costumes have been most lavishly provided; the materials are of the finest and richest qualities, and the colors such as blend harmoniously and picturesquely one with the other, forming sometimes quaint and beautiful combinations and sometimes rich and dazzling contrasts that in their exuberance of color entrance and feast the eyes.

SUMMER OPERA.

Jeannie Winston Opera Company to Entertain Duluthians Next Week. L. N. Scott, manager of the Metropolitan Opera house, St. Paul, was in the city this week making arrangements with Manager Condon for the initial appearance of the Jeannie Winston Opera company in this city. Manager Scott has just returned from a trip East, and during that time he witnessed this opera company in two performances, the operas "Fra Diavolo" and "La Perichole." He was so well pleased with the organization that he extended the engagement at the Metropolitan Opera house, St. Paul, to a season of ten weeks, which is four more weeks than he originally intended to play them, but he was so strongly impressed with the artistic and finished performances of this company that he firmly believes that Miss Winston and her coterie of artists could easily play St. Paul twenty weeks instead of ten. The Duluth engagement begins Wednesday evening, June 1. During their stay here the company will present the following operas: Wednesday night, "Boccaccio"; Thursday night, "La Perichole"; Friday night, "Fra Diavolo"; Saturday night, "Chimes of Normandy"; Sunday night, "Prince Methusalem." The company is headed by Miss Jeannie Winston, the greatest impersonator of male roles in this country. She is the only woman who has ever attempted to play the role of Fra Diavolo in Auber's famous and tuneful opera of that name. Miss Winston has been abroad for the past year studying music, joining this with a trip for pleasure. She is just now in her prime and after her year's recreation she will give great performances this season. The prima donna soprano, Miss Alice Johnson, is a lady who is young, beautiful and highly accomplished in operatic music, and during her short season with the Winston company, has already made a great hit and shares the honors of the operas with Miss Winston. The other members of the company are: Miss Helen Harrington, character contralto; Miss Annie Carmen, contralto; Miss Nettie Black, soprano; Mr. Charles Kenwick, tenor; Mr. Charles Tyrell, comedian; Mr. Harry Rattenbury, baritone; A. H. Bell, buffo; Mr. W. H. Parr, baritone; Mr. Samuel Partello, tenor, and Miss Annie Barrett, soubrette.

Dramatic Gossip. John H. Russell and Amelia Glover were married in New York last Tuesday and sailed for Europe.

Fanny Davenport is doing a tremendous business this week at the Chicago Opera house with "Cleopatra."

At the end of this month Her Majesty's theater in London will be pulled down and a mammoth hotel erected on the site.

Rubinstein's opera, "Moses," just finished, is in eight acts and will require two evenings to produce.

Cora Tanner is reading two plays, one by Martha Monton, the other by William Haworth. She will go out next season with one or both.

Manager H. R. Jacobs is said to be engaged in forming a syndicate to build a colossal new theater in Chicago, and to have the same ready for the World's fair.

Maud Harrison denies the report that she is to retire from A. M. Palmer's company, at the close of this season. She is re-engaged.

A copartnership has been entered into by and between Mrs. Jennie Kimball and H. R. Jacobs for the seasons of 1892-3-4, including the World's fair, in the management of Corinne.

Miss Jeanette St. Henry, the prima donna of the De Wolf Hopper Opera company, who made the hit last year in the production of "Wang," retires from that organization at the close of the present season and intends to devote a year to studying with Madam Cappiani, who promises a great future for the young lady.

Immediately after young Salvini's engagement at Boston, he and Manager Condon sailed for Europe and will proceed to Mme. Patti's castle in Wales where the diva will produce at her own theater the new version of "Cavalleria Rusticana," herself appearing as Santuzza and young Alexander Salvini as Teriddu.

Wm. H. Crane has bought the steam yacht Melissa, and has christened it Senator. During the summer he will entertain his callers with his well known lavish liberality, while the yacht is cleaving the blue Atlantic.

The Timmerman Grand Opera house, Chicago, has been renamed the Marlowe theater in honor of the charming young actress, Miss Julia Marlowe.

Ex-Queen Natalie of Serbia, has written a play based upon her stormy experiences as wife of King Milan. She calls the play "A Mother" among the situations are those relating to the denial of access to her son, King Alexander, and her expulsion from Belgrade.

The Weather.

U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, DULUTH, MINN., May 28.—A new wave of low pressure is now central over Northern Minnesota, having moved down from the Northwest since yesterday. It has not as yet been attended by heavy precipitation or very high winds, but probably will be before it moves away.

The temperature fell decidedly over Lake Superior yesterday, and raised in all surrounding sections still remains high, except in the extreme Northwest and around Lake Superior.

It is probable that showers will prevail here today, and the wind should shift to the southwest becoming a gale and bring much warmer weather, followed by colder Monday.

The highest temperature here yesterday was 65°, the lowest last night 38°, the rainfall last night amounted to .28 inch.

Southeast storm signals are displayed at all points on Lake Superior, Michigan and Green Bay.

DULUTH, May 28.—Local forecast for Duluth until 8 p. m. May 29: Showers; warmer; winds becoming southwest.

B. H. BRONSON, Observer.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Forecast till 8 p. m. Sunday: For Wisconsin: Severe local storms this afternoon clearing Sunday; fair Monday; southerly winds. For Minnesota: Showers, followed by fair Sunday; fair Monday; slightly warmer, followed by cooler Sunday night; winds becoming northwest, increasing.

GRAVES IS A WINNER.

The splendid list of names attached to the petition asking Col. Graves to enter the field as a candidate for the Republican congressional nomination is something of which the colonel has good reason to feel proud. The list embraces the names of many of the most prominent Republicans in Duluth and West Duluth, as well as those of many others who have not been so prominent but are numbered among the rank and file of the party—many of them belonging to the working classes, true, honest Republicans, whose sole desire is to see the party in St. Louis county represented by a worthy candidate whose past record will guarantee that the interests of Duluth would not be neglected in congress. These men are not moved by political considerations in assuming this attitude. They are not seeking offices at the hands of the next congressman. Their only object is that Duluth shall be represented in the national house of representatives by a man of character and ability. They believe that in Col. Graves they have found such a man, and they will go to the primaries next Thursday to vote for delegates favorable to his nomination.

The supporters of Mr. Kendall are badly scared by the pronounced expression of public opinion in favor of Col. Graves. They have therefore resorted to the old trick of retelling false statements concerning the attitude of other counties in the district, and one of these stories is that Col. Graves, if he receives the support of the St. Louis county convention to the district convention, cannot secure the nomination on account of some feeling against him in the Western counties. There is not a word of truth in this statement. Col. Graves has many warm friends throughout the district. They are numerous enough to bring to his support enough delegates from the West to insure his nomination, providing that he has St. Louis county at his back. Col. Graves and his friends here have positive assurances to this effect. They have not gone into this contest with their eyes shut. They canvassed the situation carefully. They obtained reports from all parts of the district, and they found that there is no man in Duluth who is more widely known or held in greater esteem by the Republicans of the Sixth district than is Col. Graves.

In years past when this legislative district covered several counties which are now detached from it, Col. Graves represented them in the state legislature and his course in that body commanded their approval and admiration. They stand ready now to aid in sending him to a sphere of still greater legislative usefulness. But all this is contingent upon the action of St. Louis county. The Republicans of this county must on Thursday next turn out to the primaries and elect delegates favorable to Col. Graves. The Herald believes that they will do so. The feeling in behalf of Col. Graves is so strong that it must carry all before it and unless all the usual indications are astray he will sweep every precinct in the city and enough outside to control the convention by a large majority.

ATTORNEY ALLEN.

The Herald has received another communication from Attorney S. D. Allen ostensibly in reference to the Duluth & Northeastern ordinance. It is a mass of insolence and abuse, devoid of argument and characteristically vile in its insinuations, and therefore The Herald declines to publish it. Probably Mr. Allen will be much astonished at this statement, because the newspapers have permitted him in the past to air his views to such an extent that he now imagines that the public is yearning to find out what he thinks on every subject.

The fact is that the public does not care a continental what Mr. Allen thinks about the Northeastern ordinance or any other subject. It has learned to value his opinions at their true worth, and that is so infinitesimal that their repetition in these columns would be not only a waste of valuable space but an imposition on the readers of The Herald. The communication received at this office today displays the venom and rancor which fill his narrow mind, and shows unmistakably that personal spite and not his professed regard for the dear public's interests prompt his bitter and unreasonable attacks upon the common council.

THE TORRENS SYSTEM.

Several interviews with leading members of the bar and other citizens of Duluth on the Torrens system of land registration are published in another column. They are accompanied by a brief summary of the more prominent features of the system. This is a question that will speedily attract considerable public attention, and it is well that it should receive due consideration and be well discussed. At the last session of the state legislature, the governor was authorized to appoint a commission to enquire into the workings of the system and if its introduction into Minnesota was deemed advisable, to prepare a bill and present it at the session next January. This commission has held several meetings and has become very favorably impressed with the system. It is understood that it will present a lengthy report in support of the system and recommending its adoption here.

There is no doubt that there is a great need of a more simple form of registration of land titles and one which will more effectually prevent the expense and annoyance due to title sharks than that which obtains at present. It is believed that the Torrens system more nearly accomplishes these desirable results than does any other system that has been introduced in any country. The system is one of great simplicity and it is not as expensive as the one now in operation in this state. It has stood tests in Australia and in several provinces of Canada, and in no place where it has been tried would the people be willing to return to the system which it superseded. No material change is needed to introduce the system here. All that is necessary is to change the registries of deeds to registries of titles. The only addition to the list of officials would be the commission of examiners. Their salary could not be considered an additional cost to the community, because they would give a final opinion on abstracts that would otherwise have to be read and passed upon by private experts every time the land described is sold or mortgaged. No change is demanded in our principles and rules of law; no change in the authority and jurisdiction of our courts.

Every property owner would be benefited by a system which would put an end to the blackmailing schemes of title sharks. Holders of property would have a simple, intelligible, indefeasible title so far as it can humanly be made. The state would defend any title which the examiners had passed as perfect, and this would act as an effectual estoppel upon the vexatious suits of title sharks. The blackmailers would not feel like contesting a title, with the power of the state opposed to them. Of course the title insurance companies and abstract men, and a small proportion of the lawyers, will oppose the introduction of the system because it will touch their pockets. But it would be a saving and a benefit to the people and the interest of no one class should be permitted to stand in the way of such an important reform.

MEMORIAL DAY NUMBER.

Next Monday's edition of The Herald will contain many attractive features, appropriate to the day when the nation pauses to entwine the tombs of its dead heroes with the garlands of affections. In connection with the complete report of the Memorial day exercises in Duluth and elsewhere, we will publish several special literary features bearing on this theme, from the pens of well-known writers.

Maj. Alfred R. Calhoun will contribute a pathetic story of war time, entitled "The Widow's Boy." There will be four charming poems by well known writers, with several short but interesting sketches. All these articles will be charmingly illustrated. The leading illustration will be accompanied by a descriptive poem, "The Sleeping Soldier," which is a beautiful bit of poetry. Subscribers and new readers desiring extra copies will do well to place their orders in advance.

Twelve pages are again necessary today to accommodate the advertisers' demands upon The Herald and at the same time preserve enough space for the news and literary features. This issue of The Herald will also go to 6500 different homes in Duluth and West Duluth, an extra edition of 5000 copies having been ordered for distribution in places where the regular subscribers are not located.

A bill has been favorably reported in congress to increase and equalize the pay of letter carriers. This is a measure that should be passed. The letter carrier's lot is not an easy one and he deserves much better pay than he gets now.

Now that a young girl in Cincinnati has been made insane by the excessive use of strong tea, it is expected that Miss Frances Willard will also include it in the list of articles that should be prohibited.

THE MILLING INDUSTRY.

The Herald devotes considerable space today to the testimony given by the Minneapolis millers before the interstate commerce commission who are conducting the inquiry into the charges made against the railroads of discrimination in favor of Duluth. It is not right perhaps to gloat over the upbuilding of Duluth as a milling center and the decadence of Minneapolis in that industry, but the story told by the Minneapolis millers must be read with a certain degree of pleasure by the people of Duluth. That pleasure is caused by the declaration of these millers that, if the present rates be continued much longer, Duluth will become the great milling center of the country.

Of course they allege that these rates are unjust and that Minneapolis is being injured by discrimination. The fact is that the rates now in force are just and proper, and to accede to the Minneapolis demand would be a denial to Duluth of the advantages which are rightfully hers by virtue of her geographical position. The Duluth papers for many years claimed that with equitable grain rates Duluth would become a great milling center, and the Minneapolis people laughed at them. When at last the railroads granted tardy justice to Duluth in the shape of equitable rates, the fulfillment of that prediction was begun.

The milling industry here has grown rapidly in the past two years, and it will grow more rapidly in the future. The Minneapolis millers see the handwriting on the wall and they are scared. How badly they are scared their testimony, given in another column, will show.

STILL ON THE FENCE.

The News still dexterously balances itself upon the congressional fence. Hon. G. G. Hartley says that Mr. Kendall should be nominated, while the vested proprietor goes to a meeting at West Duluth and shouts for Col. Graves. Thus the balance is nicely preserved and both sides are kept in good humor, while the News itself preserves a masterly silence. Just why Mr. Hartley should be a Kendall supporter at this time is not apparent, and the vested proprietor might interview him on this subject and give the people the benefit of the information.

It is just possible that the story afloat upon the streets, that Mr. Hartley is anxious to see Mr. Kendall nominated because he would be beaten and this would improve Mr. Hartley's chances two years hence, may be entirely incorrect. Perhaps Mr. Hartley will tell the public through the vested proprietor. If this is not correct, and Mr. Hartley is really supporting Mr. Kendall because he considers him the best man for the office, why does not the News also support him?

The Blaine sentiment has grown wonderfully during the past few days and now seems to be sweeping all before it. Harrison, from present indications, will have but a sorry following at Minneapolis.

CHINIQUEY ON EDUCATION.

He Says Catholics Are Seeking to Destroy the Public Schools.

Father Chiniquey's audience last night was very small indeed, a result of a combination of several circumstances—a falling off of interest in a lecturer who announces one subject and delivers a discourse on another, a threatening weather and bad management. The lecturer's subject was "Why Does the Church of Rome Want to Destroy the Public Schools?" The speaker said that the public schools of America were the foundations of liberty of conscience and shed the light of knowledge upon all matters, whether secular or religious, and as such had incurred the enmity of the Roman Catholic church, which was seeking by every covert method to either utterly destroy them or to impair their usefulness. He said the public schools taught freedom, but endeavored to show that the Roman Catholic church was opposed to freedom by quoting from another "secret" book, alleged to have been written by St. Ignatius, which said the inferior must obey the superior in all things, even as responsive as a corpse is to the beaers which carry it—passively responsive. The lecturer said the American public school system had been the result of the withdrawal of the Bible from its list of text books, and claimed that the recent action of the Roman Catholics in seeking to allow their children to attend the public schools if religious exercises were entirely omitted, was a very shrewd move—a trap into which the Protestants had willingly walked. He closed by a long appeal to American citizens to guard carefully the public school system and to raise the banner of enlightened education and rally about and defend it.

About 1:30 o'clock this morning an alarm of fire was turned in. The company made quick time to the blaze, which was caused by parties setting fire to some straw in a barrel in the rear of Kirkwood & Thorpe's drug store. The fire was extinguished without much trouble and before any damage had been done. It was undoubtedly of incendiary origin and while there is no proof to base the accusation upon, it is stated that it was set by two young men who were drunk and lighted the fire to wake up the town. Both these parties are under arrest.

One Hundred School Ma'ams to Come to the Head of the Lakes in July.

Some time in July or the early part of August, Duluth will be invaded by about 100 school ma'ams from Buffalo, Syracuse, Albany and Erie. They will come by the lakes in one of the Transit company's steamers and will stay here two days and then spend two days on Lake Vermilion, and the two iron ranges, give three days to a north shore trip around Isle Royale and to Port Arthur, and the balance of the time they will spend at the following side trips: Brule river, Apostle Islands, Serpent lake at Deerwood, and one or two other places. Their stay in this vicinity will cover nearly two weeks. Among the party will be Miss Bessie Woodward, of New York, who is said to be one of the best ladies with a bass rod on the American continent.

Owing to the continued rainy weather it is, at this date, impossible to state just when we will open for guests. The carpets, furniture, etc., are all here and ready to put in place. With a few days fine weather we can accomplish a great deal towards the opening and hope by June 1 to be in a position to announce through the press of the city when we can open the doors of the Merchants' hotel to the public.

JAY W. ANDERSON.

A few reasons why you should invest in a lot in the Fifth division of Duluth Heights: Because of its nearness to the center of the city. Its accessibility by means of the Incline railway and the electric line now building, which will result in a rapid development of the property, and because in no other location in the city located an equal distance from the business center can you purchase a lot for double the price we are now asking. Come in and let us show you our plats and prices, and we will also take you to the property at any time and prove our claims.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Programs of the Two Posts for the Exercises on Monday.

The G. A. R. post and different organizations which have combined in preparing for the observance of Memorial day have practically completed all arrangements. In the forenoon the exercises will be in charge of the Willis A. Gorman post, No. 13. All members of both this and Culver post are to meet at the G. A. R. hall in the Hayes block at 9:30 o'clock and at 9:45 o'clock will leave the hall and march on Superior street to their rendezvous at the rear of the Palladio building. From here the Woodland cars will be taken to the cemetery, where the usual ritualistic exercises will be held. The Lincoln Camp Sons of Veterans will act as the escort, and bring party. The school children will contribute flowers for the graves.

In the afternoon Joshua B. Culver post will have charge of the exercises. The parade will take place at 1:30 o'clock under the direction of W. G. Ten Brook, who will be chief marshal. Immediately after the parade Mayor d'Autremont will deliver an address probably at the band stand in the rear of the Palladio building. Attorney J. H. Boyle will recite a poem and a vocal quartet will sing.

The ladies circle of the G. A. R. was organized at Gorman Post hall yesterday afternoon and have already commenced work in arranging floral tributes for the different graves. They will also serve luncheon for the members of the posts and bands taking part in the forenoon. The following are the officers: President, Mrs. C. F. Robbins; senior vice president, Mrs. E. Meade; junior vice president, Mrs. J. L. Forward; chaplain, Mrs. Forsythe, of West Duluth; secretary, Mrs. F. M. Davy; treasurer, Mrs. A. Pane. The circle starts out with a membership of about fifty.

Col. Graves' Candidacy is Receiving the Support of Representative Republicans and Business Men.

O. H. Simonds Gives Some Reasons Why He Should Represent This District in Congress.

West Duluth Republican Club Meeting Last Evening Develops Considerable Enthusiasm for Col. Graves.

The candidacy of Col. Graves for the congressional nomination has aroused an enthusiasm among the Republicans generally that exceeds the expectations of his friends who were prominent in bringing him out. In political and business circles alike the fact is recognized that he is the man most eminently fitted to represent this district and especially the city of Duluth, whose interests are those of the district, in congress. The assurances of support and satisfaction with his announcement which he has received and the character of the men from whom they come has been most gratifying to Col. Graves. More than this, the men who want him are getting at work. The city will be thoroughly canvassed before the day of the caucus and there is every indication to believe that Col. Graves will carry nearly every precinct in the city. In West Duluth he has developed a strength which has surprised the Kendall men. From all over the county messages have been received expressing satisfaction at Col. Graves' candidacy and assuring him of support.

A Kendall meeting was held last evening at the St. Louis hotel. It was given out to be a business session and it was very private, an inner and outer guard being placed to see that none but the faithful entered.

O. H. SIMONDS TALKS.

He Gives Some Reasons Why Col. Graves is the Right Man. One of the prominent men of the city who is especially pleased at the candidacy of Col. Graves is O. H. Simonds, who probably represents interests which are as vitally interested in legislation as any in the city. Mr. Simonds said today to a Herald reporter:

"In view of the rapid development of the lumber and iron interests, Duluth needs a representative in congress who will be qualified to represent any of her interests and secure whatever appropriations or recognition may be needed. In my judgment it is a business question as to who ought to be sent rather than a political one. There is no doubt that Duluth constitutes the most important part of the district. She has never had a representative herebefore, all of them being from interior points. It is now fair and desirable that the special interests of Duluth which are also the interests of all the country back of her should be represented. In my opinion no man in the district is so well equipped for exercising a beneficial influence and securing results as Col. Graves. He has had a large legislative experience, his state acquaintance is large, and he has resided in Washington during the last two or three winters and has become well acquainted with the men who shape public affairs. He is recognized everywhere as the leading representative of the interests at the head of Lake Superior, and further than this he is a man of good tact and understands the employment of means to secure his ends. I favor his nomination and election because I believe he can do more for the district than any other man in it. The Republican party in this district contains many able men, but none who have the experience and training needed by a congressman which Col. Graves possesses."

IS THEIR CANDIDATE.

West Duluth Republican Club Meeting Last Evening Over Col. Graves. The Republican club of West Duluth met last evening in the city hall for the purpose of better organization and the room was well filled by an enthusiastic audience. President Towne, of the county club, was introduced and explained the working of league clubs and urged the necessity for organizing thoroughly, and explained the party doctrines. Ex-Village Attorney Phelps then spoke, stating that as he had been asked what his politics were he considered this a good time to show them that he was a Republican. He made a good Republican talk and is a valuable addition to the ranks of the club.

Col. C. H. Graves was then introduced as the next congressman from this district, and the hearty applause with which he was received showed the esteem in which he is held by West Duluth Republicans. G. J. Mallory, a red hot Republican, closed the list of speaking by a stirring Republican speech, in which he exhorted the members of the club to stand and work together.

The West Duluth Republicans are united in their support of Col. Graves and will stand to a man for him. If the feeling elsewhere throughout the district is as unanimous as it is in West Duluth his opposition will be very weak.

COL. GRAVES ACCEPTS.

A Favorable Answer to the Petitions Presented to Him.

Col. Graves yesterday gave a favorable answer to the numerous signed petitions which were presented to him, requesting him to enter the field as a candidate for the Republican nomination. Following is a copy of the petition and some of the names attached thereto: DULUTH, Minn., May 24, 1892.—To Hon. C. H. Graves, Duluth, Minn.: Dear Sir: We whose names are hereto subscribed, respectfully request that you consent to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for the office of congressman from the Sixth Minnesota district at the coming election, and pledge your hearty support both at the caucuses and at the election: Daniel G. Cash, S. D. Allen, George Spencer, J. B. Sutherland.

Col. Graves' reply is as follows: DULUTH, Minn., May 27th, 1892.—Messrs. D. G. Cash, Geo. Spencer, S. D. Allen, J. B. Sutherland and others: Gentlemen, I had neither expected nor desired to be a candidate for any office, but this request is signed by so numerous and truly representative a body of citizens, that I shall accept the call and try to do my duty. My efforts for over twenty years have been to build up and develop this locality and all of Northern Minnesota, the interests of which are identical with those of Duluth, and I propose to continue these efforts in any position which I am placed. Very respectfully yours, C. H. GRAVES.

ARE SCARED OF DULUTH

The Tale of Woe Related to the Interstate Commerce Commission by the Millers of Minneapolis.

Duluth Millers by Reason of This City's Superior Advantages Can Undersell Them in the East.

Minneapolis Millers are Losing Trade Constantly and Their Business is Now Conducted at a Loss.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 28.—The hearing of the charges of discrimination in favor of Duluth made by the chamber of commerce against the various railroads which have been heard by a committee of the interstate commerce commission, came to an abrupt termination yesterday. The complainants concluded their testimony and the railroads declined to submit any evidence on the ground that as there was not a quorum of the commission present there could be no immediate decision rendered and for the further reason that they did not have all their evidence ready. The hearing was accordingly adjourned.

The evidence of Charles A. Pillsbury, giving the view of the charges from the millers' standpoint, showed how badly scared they are at the rapid advance of Duluth as a milling center. Mr. Pillsbury said the present condition of the flour market is such that flour cannot be made in Minneapolis and sold in the markets at a profit, unless it is some particularly well known brand. This state of affairs always exists at times in the milling business. It originated at Buffalo, and within a few years developed at Lake Superior. The Duluth mills, within a year, have jumped from comparative insignificance to a 15,000-barrel capacity a day, and a contract has just been let for another mill with 3000 barrels capacity. This sudden prominence of Duluth as a wheat mart has been caused by the Northern Pacific road, which established an equal rate to Minneapolis and Duluth, which other roads had to adopt or involve themselves in a rate war.

The milling-in-transit rates were explained, their origin noted and their effect on Minneapolis explained. They were in operation eight or ten years. After the establishment of the milling-in-transit rates, the millers of Minneapolis carried a differential from the roads that penetrate the wheat belt. Later, after the alleged discrimination, and when it began to be known in the Eastern money markets that Duluth had secured the advantage of Minneapolis in the making and shipping of flour, it was an easy matter for Duluth to secure money to build her flour mills. "In quickness of reply," says Mr. Pillsbury, "I was the only Northwestern miller who believed in milling in transit. I understand," he continued, smiling, "that they all believe in it now. In order for the millers of Minneapolis to prosper and compete with Duluth the wheat must be brought here, ground and shipped East by way of the great lakes, at the same rate that it takes to carry the wheat to Duluth. If the present discrimination continues the milling business will be utterly destroyed, and that, too, in a very short time.

The same rate that it takes to carry the wheat to Duluth, if the present discrimination continues the milling business will be utterly destroyed, and that, too, in a very short time. The Duluth millers are beginning to offer their flour in the market at a lower rate than we can sell it, and it is significant that their rates are lower than those for the most part, at just 15 cents below Minneapolis prices. At a profit of 10 cents a barrel every Minneapolis miller who ships flour to Duluth not only loses his profit but he also loses the cost of a dead loss of 5 cents a barrel."

This was the gist of the big miller's testimony regarding the rise of Minneapolis as a milling center and the precarious position of the Duluth millers by reason of the so-called discriminations in favor of Duluth. His reasons for asking the abatement of the alleged discrimination are these: On account of the fact that the Duluth millers here and given the roads wheat to carry; on account of the return high grade freight which these roads take out of Minneapolis and St. Paul; on account of the fact that this discrimination will in time extend itself to jobbing and other industries, and on account of the absolute fairness of the proposition. When the subject of the alleged discrimination, he contended, would not be a discrimination against Duluth, but would simply put her on an equal footing with Minneapolis.

Here is the way in which Mr. Pillsbury answered the question, "What effect would the 5-cent rate from Minneapolis to Duluth have upon Milwaukee?" "It would put Milwaukee at a disadvantage on wheat bought in this territory, and probably half of their wheat comes from this source. It would give Minneapolis an advantage of 8 cents a bushel on their wheat, but, bless you, this wouldn't hurt Milwaukee any. On the same principle that you can't spoil a rotten egg, you can't hurt Milwaukee by lowering the flour rate from Minneapolis to Duluth. If Duluth hasn't knocked the Milwaukee millers out already she will never do so. I would be glad to help Milwaukee in this fight. But let me tell you that Milwaukee millers don't have to come to Minneapolis to get their wheat. They can get it direct from the wheat points of the two Dakotas, and in case we succeeded in getting this 5-cent rate between Minneapolis and Duluth, the rate between these two points and Milwaukee will be lowered proportionately. It is absolutely sure to follow."

F. L. Greenleaf, president of the Minneapolis chamber of commerce, was the next witness. He said: "Unless we get relief our mills must shut down and so must those of Milwaukee and the country mills to the South and East. We are losing trade constantly and we can't continue milling unless there is a change. There is no money in mills in Minneapolis today except in exceptional cases.

SILBERSTEIN & BONDY.

Duluth millers are largely fixing the price. There is a large territory from which Duluth can get wheat and make flour, and put it on the market at a rate which will compel the roads to carry flour from Minneapolis to Duluth free in order to put the two cities on a parity. In the natural Minneapolis territory there is more than enough wheat to supply the Minneapolis millers with ships to Minneapolis and Lake Superior as from that northern territory alone Duluth cannot fix the price of flour. She has to come down into our territory to do that.

W. H. Dunwoody contended that the discrimination existed, and unless it was removed the Minneapolis mills would be driven out of Minneapolis. The Duluth carriers have been feeling the pinch during the past few months, in which time the milling capacity of the Zenith city has been very materially added to. Up to Jan. 1, 1891, the Minneapolis mills were worth at least $100,000 a year, but since that time the Minneapolis mills have been steadily declining, until now it has disappeared, save in the case of some of the best known mills, which are still, perhaps, holding their own and saving themselves an actual loss. Mr. Dunwoody thought a milling-in-transit rate, or something of that sort, would relieve Minneapolis.

Samuel Morse, of Morse, Sammis & Co., was next. He repeated what the other witnesses had said regarding the destructive character to Minneapolis of the alleged Duluth discrimination. Flour was now being made in Minneapolis at no profit at all, or at so slight a profit as to make the milling business unprofitable. It would bother anybody to find a profit in Minneapolis this year.

Senator W. D. Washburn was called upon to tell about the progress of railway building in the Northwest from the start in the early '60s to the present, and then questioned regarding the questions of rates and discriminations, the Duluth case in particular. A. C. Loring said that within less than a year the milling capacity of Duluth increased from almost nothing to 8000 barrels a day and 16,000 barrels more are in process of construction. Incidentally Mr. Loring said he considered the Pillsbury-Washburn Flour Mills company, if fair rates by rail can be had, the best investment in Minneapolis. Last year, however, it paid no dividend and its stock is now quoted at 1/10 for shares worth at par $10 each. Capt. C. J. Martin, of the Washburn-Crosby company, said that the C. C. Washburn company, which owns the mills his company operates, daily capacity 9000 barrels, had not paid more than 3 or 4 per cent interest on an investment of $1,000,000 for several years. Taking the last five years together the Minneapolis mills have made no profits at all. James F. Bell, of the Washburn-Crosby company, asserted that if wheat can be taken to the sea board at a cheaper rate than the flour (referring back to the 5 cent rate on wheat and the 7 cent rate on flour between Minneapolis and Duluth) the exporting of flour will cease. Unless Minneapolis can find some relief, her flour trade, foreign and domestic, must go to pieces. Unless there is relief, witness would leave Minneapolis as soon as his lease on the C. C. Washburn mill expires.

THE RESPONDENTS' ANSWER.

What They Say in the Formal Reply to the Petitioners.

In the answer of the respondent railroads these companies deny the charge of discrimination; they claim that the rates for years past have been relatively the same from North and South Dakota to Minneapolis and to Lake Superior as at present. They deny that the instances cited fairly represented the system of rates; they deny that cars are more quickly unloaded at Lake Superior points.

As to the charge of discrimination the respondents deny that distance alone is a controlling factor in making rates; they say, and Paris interests in the longer line adopts such rate as is necessary and customary. That the rates in question from points in North and South Dakota and a considerable part of Minnesota, for Duluth, were made by the Northern Pacific, it having the shorter line. Its rate to Minneapolis from the same points is the same as to Duluth, where the distance is substantially the same.

Respondents further allege that wheat in elevators along their lines, about 25,000 bushels, has been purchased with reference to existing rates. Purchasers, they say, and Paris interests in the wheat and milling interests of Minneapolis, and members of petitioner have, as respondents believe, been active in the promotion of this proceeding, and before the close of navigation shipped large quantities of wheat and flour to Lake Superior points. This petition has been filed since navigation opened, and should the rate to Minneapolis be reduced, parties in the wheat and milling interests of Minneapolis, who are holding this wheat in store, not the producers, would be benefited to the extent of the difference in rates. Should the cost of transportation to Duluth and Superior be advanced, those interested in shipping to Duluth and Superior points would lose the difference in cost of transportation.

The answer then proceeds to argue that in through shipments Lake Superior points have a natural advantage and the shippers prefer that route especially when there is such large export shipment. When crops have been less and exports lighter prices have been higher at Minneapolis than at Duluth and smaller quantities have moved East by way of Lake Superior ports. The amount of flour manufactured at Superior points is not sufficient to materially affect the market or the price received by Minneapolis millers.

Respondent alleges that more than 20,000,000 bushels of wheat are produced annually in the territory from which the rates are less to Minneapolis. The wheat and milling interests of Minneapolis thus have a lower rate than other points for a large part of the wheat product of the Dakotas and Minnesota.

Respondents admit that the Omaha, Duluth, Northern Pacific and Great Northern companies have an interest in docks and transfer facilities at Lake Superior points, but deny that they have made rates with a view of building up Lake Superior interests at the expense of Minneapolis.

With regard to flour rates, Minneapolis to Duluth, they deny that they are unreasonable; claim that the earnings on such traffic are less than 1 cent per ton per mile—which is lower than the rate between any two points of like distance west of the Mississippi river; that it is in fact part of a through rate upon shipments destined to Buffalo or the seaboard; that a reduction in rates from Minneapolis would necessitate a reduction from points along the lines of certain respondents east of Minneapolis and would be unjust to the roads, while to deny corresponding reductions to points along these lines would be to close up the mills at these points on account of the advantage given Minneapolis over them.

Fast Typewriting.

The fact that Chas. H. McGurkin wrote 200 words in one minute was sworn to by prominent disinterested parties in St. Paul, who witnessed the work. Mr. McGurkin explained to his several audiences in this vicinity that he does not consider writing a memorized sentence as a fair test. He can say this with good grace, as no other operator makes claim to having written more than 182 words per minute.

Mr. McGurkin operates a Remington standard typewriter. He writes blindfolded, from dictation, on matter that he never heard before, at a rate of over 100 words per minute. When he writes from copy, he reads from his notes continuously, operating the key of the machine at same time, without looking at them. This is a great saving of time. The gentleman has tried all the leading typewriting machines now on the market, and claims that it is only possible to accomplish the same results on a machine with compact keyboard, like the Remington. This machine has only half as many keys as other typewriter machines, writing the same number of characters.

Mr. McGurkin is a practical court reporter and is not in the employ of any typewriter company.

QUIET IN THE CIRCLE.

Duluth Society Seems to be Passing Through a Season of Decided Langor and Ennui.

Coming Events are Being Anticipated With Interest But Nothing is Going on at Present.

The Musical Suite Holds Its Final Meeting of the Season—Other Social Happenings.

Not much has occurred to enliven the social world in Duluth the past. Pleasure's devotees are talking about the unknown date of the Kitchi Gami club's reception in their new home, and the "hop" of the Duluth Boat club is also looked forward to with a great deal of pleasure. The assembly dance at the Spaulding Wednesday evening was another repetition of the pleasant affairs which mark the social progress of the club, but beyond the events mentioned social topics are confined nowadays to a few weddings, some church socials and small private parties. The weather seems to have taken a turn for the better and the improvement will doubtless stop the somewhat heavy exodus of social leaders which has been going on for nearly a month. This will also tend to brighten up the social world and may afford a larger field for those whose station enables them to swing around the circle.

Leap Year Party.

The Misses Macfarlane, Mills, McLaughlin and Knudson were the managers of a very enjoyable leap year party last Wednesday at Svea hall. About fifty couples were present, the ladies doing the escorting, floor management and catering in a very happy manner.

THE FINAL MEETING.

The Musical Suite Gives Its Last Program of the Season Today. The last meeting of the Musical Suite is being held this afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. F. White, 225 East Fourth street. Two weeks ago (the annual business meeting of the club was held at which Miss Ellen Schibsted was elected president, and Miss Jennie Grady secretary, for the ensuing year. The program which is being rendered has been arranged with special care and the numbers are unusually fine. It is as follows:

"WE," THE AVERAGE WE.

"We Work Harder Than Do Any Other People."

Question Arises, What is Outcome of This Way of Living?

Writer in the North American Review Hits the Nail on the Head.

The American works harder than does any other man or woman on earth, says the chief inspector of the New York board of health, Cyrus Edson, the North American Review.

"What is the outcome?" he asks. He shows how the way of living we have—"we," the average we—crowds upon the digestive apparatus an amount of work that sooner or later embarrasses it. "The digestive organs," he says, "are controlled by a very important system of nerves, and the nervous balance (if I may be allowed this term) of these is deranged. This gives rise to all kinds of nervous phenomena—insomnia, neuralgia and hysterical symptoms."

It is this too general condition in its various phases that Dr. E. E. Phelps, of Dartmouth college, studied with such signal success when he discovered the great remedy known as Paine's celery compound, solving for the first time in the practice of medicine the problem of restoring what Dr. Edson aptly called "the nervous balance."

Paine's celery compound is not a patent medicine; it is the prescription of one of the most eminent men his profession has had. The formula is not a secret; it has always been given freely to reputable physicians. And the unanimity with which they have endorsed it, used it, prescribed it, written about the remarkable cures it has effected, is one of the best proofs of its virtue. But a greater one is the flood of testimonials, unsolicited, that have recently come from well-known men and women in this city and throughout this state and from all parts of the country, saying in substance:

"Paine's celery compound has made me well."

As a spring remedy there is nothing can compare with it. It makes the weak strong!

For rheumatism, which is so prevalent this spring, it is the one true and never failing specific.

Witness the following communication from Mr. C. J. O'Brien, received for publication yesterday, says the Boston Globe:

"I enclose you a sample of the many letters I am receiving from all over the country, asking as to the truth of a statement printed in the Globe, giving my experience with Paine's celery compound."

I wish to state that I am the person who gave that recommendation and that when I said it cured me of acute and chronic rheumatism, which had afflicted me for years, I wrote simply the facts of the case.

Before I used this medicine my future looked dark, miserable and hopeless, for I had tried in vain all kinds of treatment. Yet before I had taken four bottles of Paine's celery compound I was jumping around like a 2-year-old colt. I had cured some twenty of my friends with this same medicine.

Nothing gives me greater pleasure than to answer inquiries concerning the authenticity of my letter and the invaluable medicinal and curative properties of this compound, but I hope this public statement will suffice, for if my correspondence increases I will have to employ a typewriter. Yours truly, C. J. O'BRIEN.

Winchell on the Towanda Mine.

In a somewhat humorous preface to an article on the Mesaba range, H. V. Winchell, in the Minneapolis Tribune, discourses at length on the difficulty met with in making developments at the new mines. Speaking of the Towanda mine he has this to say: "The older properties have been described frequently. I shall mention here only those recently developed. The Towanda has a pit 30 feet in soft, reddish-brown ore, which resembles some of the Biwabik ore. It is covered by only 8 feet of surface. From the appearance of this pit it is reasonable to expect a large body of ore on the northwest quarter of section 18, 38-16. This pit is evidently on the upper edge of the deposit, which slopes to the southeast. This is farther south than any other ore deposit in this township, but sustains the same relations to the green schist as the Biwabik and Cindinatti. There is a fine showing here for the amount of work done and the money expended."

WANTS AN EXTENSION.

J. B. Holmes Wants Thirty Days More Time in Which to Commence Work on His Railroad.

He Thought He Had Seventy-Five Days in Which to Begin Operations Instead of Only Forty-Five.

Probability That the Council Will Not Grant It and Will Declare the Ordinance Forfeited.

It begins to appear as though the statement made by Alderman Kennedy at the council last Monday evening, that the council would soon have the Duluth, Red Lake Falls & Northern franchise to give away again, will prove true. J. B. Holmes arrived in the city yesterday and yesterday afternoon notified City Clerk Burke that he would apply for an extension of the time allowed him for commencing work. This was fixed at forty-five days after the passage of the ordinance. A reporter saw Mr. Holmes last evening and he said:

"I never knew until today that the ordinance provided for commencing work within forty-five days after the passage of the ordinance. I supposed that length of time was given after the acceptance, and as thirty days was allowed for this, we would have seventy-five days in all. It was an oversight allowing it go in that way."

Mr. Holmes practically admitted that work will not be commenced within the forty-five days; the weather, he says, would prevent that. He also says that the acceptance of the ordinance will be filed Monday, but that work will not be commenced before July at the earliest. He says that he has received offers from other places which are as acceptable as anything which Duluth has given. If he comes to Duluth he will need rights over other streets to get into the city besides those he has received.

As a matter of fact it appears that Mr. Holmes has not accomplished much since the passage of the ordinance and that he has not found anyone to take his franchise off his hands and build the road. That the council will not grant an extension of time is almost certain, and the aldermen are inclined to smile at his statement that he has good offers from other points—Sucker bay, for instance. A number of them have said that on the very night that the forty-five days expires, which will be June 17, a special meeting will be called and the company declared to have failed in carrying out its provisions. From all appearances it would seem that Mr. Holmes will have to hustle during the next two weeks in order to hold his franchise.

PERSONAL.

J. B. Brislin and wife, of St. Paul, are at the Brighton.

J. J. Costello's condition is unchanged this afternoon.

C. H. Bradley, the Bay City vesselman, is in the city.

Capt. T. H. Pressnell is quite ill and confined to the house.

F. J. Marsh is seriously ill with quinsy and is confined to his bed and room.

W. A. Seely is very sick with typhoid fever. He has been taken to St. Luke's hospital.

"Our Army of the Dead" and "Cover Them Over" are two of Will Carleton's poems that will be recited next Monday over the graves of thousands who died defending our nation's honor. Will Carleton will be pleased to meet all who are friendly to his poems in the Lyceum theater next Saturday evening.

J. E. HAYNIE & CO.

A Prosperous Business is Being Enjoyed by the New Firm.

The wonderful success of Haynie & Co. in their dry goods venture on East Superior street only emphasizes what a good store, a good stock, fair prices and a full corps of expert sales people will accomplish. The plain figure system of marking all prices prevails and the rule of courteous treatment is rigidly enforced. The customer is shown the line of goods he or she wants to see and is supposed to be the best and sole judge of what he or she wants, and the sales people are instructed not to attempt to make any sales of goods not asked for. J. E. Haynie & Co. have only been open about five weeks, but they have already taken a front position in the dry goods field. Their Eastern and wholesale connections are so admirably perfect that the very latest novelties in their lines are found on their shelves or counters as soon as they appear in Chicago or New York, and their special aim to make the Duluth retail dry goods market fully as inviting or new as the busy marts of Broadway or State street. How well they have succeeded is readily judged by the extent of their business. Their delivery wagons are kept constantly on the go, and the need of larger quarters will before long be an urgent necessity.

THEATRICAL WORK A SPECIALTY.

Gentlemen:—Some three years ago your fireproofing was presented to us for examination, and after a thorough test we were asked what we thought of it. We would not at that time give an opinion of its merits; but can now say after three years of actual test, that we believe your RICINATE to be permanent and reliable, and find it to be all you represent as a fire-proof material.

We recommend its thorough application to all wood, canvas and other inflammable materials in all buildings where stage work and scenery is to be used. Its application in all instances to wood, canvas, upholstery, and other inflammable materials, made under our observation, has given perfect satisfaction, and we have no hesitancy in recommending it as a safeguard against fire. Very respectfully yours,

Signed, J. B. McELPATRICK & SONS.

BILL NYE AS A FARMER

After Some Experience, He Decides That North Carolina Well Digging is Still in Its Infancy.

William's Literary Labors Have Been Much Interfered With by the Usual Agricultural Aggravations.

[Copyright, 1892, by Edgar W. Nye.]

BUCK SHOALS, N. C.
Recently I have been digging a well on my estate and the sound of the premature blast and the wall of the widow can be heard all over the place on a still day. The word "well" comes from the Anglo-Saxon weallan, meaning to gush out. Originally meant to flow, or a naturally flowing spring, like the German word brunnen. I have one living spring on my place, and one that has passed on to a better land, I judge. Some savants who remained over night with us last week and sweetened their coffee in a reckless way, I thought, said that there was sulphur in this spring.

Possibly that is it. One of the savants even went so far as to say that it was living water. Possibly it is in a trance.

DRILLING.

Last week my well diggers ran out of explosives, and I had to go out among the neighbors to get dynamite and powder for blasting. Well digging in North Carolina is still in its infancy and needs a good deal of encouragement and capital. My well diggers furnish nothing except their clothes. They clothe themselves while boring the well. I do the rest.

I had to borrow dynamite and carry it to the works in my lap. I also had to get eighteen feet of hose, as the well digger said he only had a few left. Hose, as well as molasses and license, is used in the plural number here. We speak of those hoses, those molasses and those license.

This is the first well I have ever dug. You get a mind reader or water witch first before digging a well. He divines by means of a hazel croch the location of the vein. Then you secure a well digger, who does the actual digging at so much per foot and found. One man who dug a well here years ago on my farm at three dollars per foot and found got down eighty feet and then the well caved in on him. His widow has since sued the owner of the place on the ground that her husband did his part of the contract faithfully, but was not paid according to agreement. It involves a very fine legal point indeed.

In selecting a site for a house, I find that I have placed it so high that the well is going to be unusually massive. In order to have the house where it would easily command a view of Mr. Vanderbilt's tennis court, thus giving us the benefit of the game without the fatigue of playing it, I have placed my well at such an elevation that water will be my most expensive drink this summer.

My valet, whose duty it is to carry the water, press my trousers and do the chamberwork at the barn, took one look down the well yesterday and handed in his resignation. The well was opened in March, and the cornerstone laid with suitable ceremonies and a speech made by Mr. Dopey, but the work has seemed to drag some, owing to the fact that the Tr. Heel well digger does not own a set of tools, neither does he furnish powder, caps nor hose. Just as I would want myself in the library and proceed to work on my great posthumous job, to be called "The Great Detective Series, or the Tedious Task of Inspector Byrnes in Unearthing and Bringing to Justice the Man who Struck Billy Patterson," my farming superintendent would rush in and, making a low salaam instead of wiping his feet, state that the well sinker was out of powder.

I would then dismiss the farming superintendent, telling him to return to his duties. I call him my farming superintendent because it has a more prosperous air to it. As a matter of fact, he and his horse Lydia E. Pinkham constitute the farm force and entire posthumous staff. He is a good staff, he and Lydia. Together they are farming eleven acres of Venetian red soil this year, and putting a molding on the lower edge to keep the potatoes from falling out of the ground and injuring Mr. Vanderbilt's cotton crop and pajama plants, which are growing on the farms just below us.

Next year we will clear three more acres of white oak, leaving the stumps carved artistically with a large carved acorn or some such design, so that the field will not be so unsightly, as is too often the case with newly cleared land. One field will also be cleared of tulip and sourwood trees, the stumps, however, to be "chambered off" like a bevel post of the Fifteenth century, and on each one of these chaste stumps a piece of rustic china or plain white ware will be set with enough soil in it to sustain geraniums and other choice plants, so that instead of a miserable and unsightly field covered with blackened and repulsive stumps we will have an ornament of some kind wherever the eye rests.

When I bought the farm it was surrounded by a rough and most unsightly rail fence. I have taken these rails, and placing them in groups of three and standing them on end to form a sort of tripod, have hung therefrom an iron pot, giving the farm the appearance of a gypsy camp, as it were, for here and there all over the place may be seen these tripods with a kettle attached to each and a beautiful hollyhock or nasturtium growing out of same at a great rate.

One reason, I think, why boys leave the farm is that the farm is not made attractive. It is too prosy. Boys love art. They love to see beautiful colors and simple, artistic decorations. We moan over the fact that year after year less American boys go into agriculture, while our farms are gradually falling into the hands of the foreigner.

I believe that I have solved the great question. Boys go to the city, where they find beautiful things and efforts toward art. My boys shall never tell me that here in North Carolina four crops of lambs from the same set of parents was and has been the regular thing, while on a good year, when the mean average rainfall can see its shadow on groundhog day, the yield runs up to five and six.

My only sorrow is that the neighbors in Buncombe county and those who live near me at Buck Shoals mislead me regarding agriculture. They speak lightly of my efforts at art and misrepresent things to me regarding the business. They do it in a spirit of rivalry—a sort of fence railing, I presume—but I think it is because they do not approve of my style of farming and regard it as a sort of reproach to them for their lack of taste and artistic sense.

Now, for instance, I regard it as a little bit unneighborly to take hold of a literary man and fill him up with facts and statistics that cannot be demonstrated. I hate to be fooled with in that way. Why should a man whom I have treated with the utmost kindness ever since I came here go to work and tell me that here in North Carolina four crops of lambs from the same set of parents was and has been the regular thing, while on a good year, when the mean average rainfall can see its shadow on groundhog day, the yield runs up to five and six.

This sort of thing not only makes me feel unhappy and bitter toward my neighbors, but it has fostered a miserable spirit in my breast and caused my relations with my domestic animals to become strained. At first I laid it to the weather, but finally I began to regard my sheep with distrust. I felt that they were neglecting their duties and taking advantage of the fact that I am not an experienced farmer. So I consulted Mr. Vanderbilt, who has farmed it six weeks longer than I have, and who therefore knows the ins and outs of the business pretty well. He tells me that each crop of lambs per year is all that they get here under the most favorable circumstances.

Plum Levi also tells me that while timothy and clover often yield two and three crops, he never harvests his lambs over once a year.

It hurts the country to misrepresent these things to strangers and capitalists like myself—men who wish to build up the country and add to its wealth. Why not be fair and truthful in the start, and thus invite the good, the true and the beautiful to come and settle among us?

Last year my plug tobacco was a complete failure, and an old resident of Sandy Mush allowed that it was because I did not plant the plug with the tin tag end downward. I have since learned that one should not plant the plug at the tin tag end but the planted downward. Tobacco grows from the seed and is made into plugs afterward.

Why would it not be as well to tell a stranger those things instead of allowing him to make a large fluted ass of himself with a Watteau back?

My well is down now to porphyry rock and schist with a hematite stain in it. Neighbors tell me that even if I do not strike water it will make a good cool place to keep vegetables in.

I learned yesterday that the former owners of the place have each dug a dry well 200 feet deep on this farm and then sold it out at a sacrifice. Can it be that I am elected to contribute also a 200 foot root cellar? Oh, heavens! Oh, heavens! It cannot, must not be.

Since the above was written I have been out all day on horseback hunting for more dynamite among the neighbors.

I borrowed four large cartridges of a kind hearted neighbor and carried them in my coat tail pocket aboard a fractions horse twenty-nine miles over a mountain road. When I got there the hair in the butter of my sandwich had turned white.

"HAVE YOU ANY HOSE?"

When I handed my cartridges over to the well digger after my day's work in securing them and heaved a sigh of relief, feeling sure that now the work could go on, he took them and looked at them for quite a spell, and then he said, sort of slow and snail like:

"That's—hit. Now—if—we—had—some—hose—we—could—put—in—a—blast."

"Haven't you got any hose?" I asked in loud, parliamentary tones.

"No," he said. "I—had—a—few—yesterday—but—I—ain't—got—a—one—now."

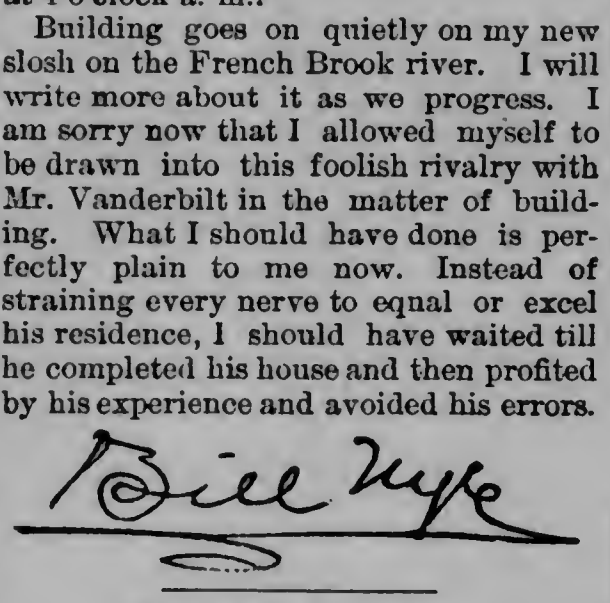

So I put in the following day getting hose. This sort of thing makes my literary work disconnected, and I have always wanted my posthumous work to be my very best. "God bless you," said a lady friend of mine the other day, "especially for your posthumous work."

I am having the usual trouble peculiar to domestic animals in the spring. I bought a donkey last year for the children. This year we had him clipped, as he was getting most too woolly and the hens got to burrowing into his folds and hiding their nests, so we got a clipper to clip him. He is about 80 years of age and never had his hair cut before.

We found a good many things which the neighbors had missed. They were in the stable after the clipping had been done. But he caught cold, for we clipped him too early. One should not prune a donkey in March. It is risky. He is likely to get pneumonia. Ever since that I've had to cover up this donkey of nights, and two or three times in the night I must go and see if he has kicked the cover off. He is often feverish at night, and his feet are hot and dry. Once they were, anyhow. That was the only time I felt of them.

I am going into the guinea hens this summer. I bought eighteen before I paused to ask myself what the guinea hen was. Will any reader of this paper who knows what the guinea hen is good for please write me at Fitchers, N. C., stating what if anything she is good for except to eat if hard pressed or to make a loud and long continued noise at 4 o'clock a. m.?

Building goes on quietly on my new slosh on the French river. I will write more about it as we progress. I am sorry now that I allowed myself to be drawn into this foolish rivalry with Mr. Vanderbilt in the matter of building. What I should have done is perfectly plain to me now. Instead of straining every nerve to equal or exceed his residence, I should have waited till he completed his house and then profited by his experience and avoided his errors.

Bill Nye

Two Harvard Stories.

I was talking with one of the English professors at Harvard yesterday about his department, and he told me of an amusing mistake made by one of the students. All juniors are required to write for thesis on prescribed subjects. One of the most recent subjects given out was, "Shall the Electoral College Be Abolished?" This he thought was a perfectly plain subject, excellently suited for discussion, so he was somewhat surprised to have one student come up and tell him that it gave no chance whatever for argument. "Why not?" asked the instructor. "I think there is a great deal to be said on both sides." "Well," answered the student, "I can't see how you, a Harvard professor and a Harvard graduate, can see any argument to prove that colleges with the elective system should be abolished."

Another story is going the rounds of Harvard, and this time the joke is on the professor himself. "I can't see how you, a Harvard professor and a Harvard graduate, can see any argument to prove that colleges with the elective system should be abolished."

Philosophical.
An old sea student, a venerable disciple of "good old Isaac Walton," once told a Companion contributor this pleasing tale of his life as an angler:

I remember when I was a boy going out one morning before sunrise to fish for pickerel. I had just hooked a big one when along came a man. He said nothing, but with monkish open stopped to see the fun. The contest had lasted more than half an hour, when suddenly, just as I was about to land the prize, the pickerel, with one last rush for liberty, made good his escape.

With a lump in my throat I instinctively turned to the man for consolation. "Waal, I'll be hanged!" he exclaimed. "Yew held on ter yer own, young fellow, but he didn't hold on ter his'n!"—Youth's Companion.

Preferred Papa.
Mother (at a reception)—Why didn't you accompany Mr. Niccelfello out to supper?

Sweet Girl—I prefer to go with papa. Mother—Mr. Niccelfello is devoted to you, and seemed much dejected by your refusal. I thought you—rather liked him?

Sweet Girl (blushing)—I do. Mother—Then why didn't you go out to supper with him?

Sweet Girl—Well, if you must know, it's because I'm ravenously hungry.—New York Weekly.

A Good Reason.
Little Johnny Fizzlepop has the habit of making up every night in the middle of the night and demanding something to eat. At last his mother said to him: "Look here, Johnny, I never want to eat anything in the night."

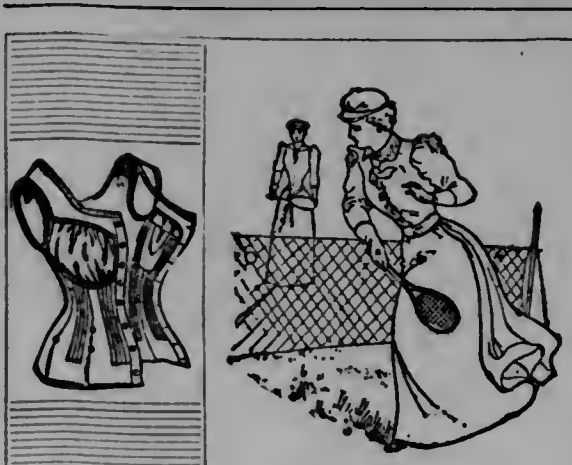

"Well, I don't think I'd care much to eat anything either in the night if I kept all my teeth in a mug of water."—Texas Sittings.

Equivalent Praise.
"Have you read my last novel, my dear friend?"
"Certainly."
"Well, and how did you like it?"
"I laid the book down with the greatest satisfaction."—Mundo Pintresco.

THE PATRIOTIC PAST.

The Most Conducive of all Holidays to Preserve Our Nationality is Now Close at Hand.

Our Victory Over Ourselves Far More Glorious Than any We Have Gained Over Our Enemies.

On Memorial Day the Bonds of Union Are Renewed With Fresh Sympathy and Added Esteem.

Some even of the few national holidays of so young a country as ours have already begun to lose their interest for the people, and their celebration has grown to be more or less perfunctory. But our latest holiday, known as Memorial or Decoration Day, promises to appeal more and more to our compatriots, to have a wider and deeper significance as the years go on. Until recently it was observed by the north and south in a sectional way, thus keeping up the old sentiments and feelings enkindled and strengthened by the civil war.

But so rapidly have prejudice and passion cooled that now the former enemies often join in paying tribute to the honored dead, so setting an example of mutual appreciation and magnanimity, hardly to have been expected so soon, that has seldom been equaled in older governments. To forget in twenty years the old animosities that had been gathering and strengthening for seventy years is the best evidence of the humanity, understanding and sympathy engendered by the institutions of a great democracy. Our victory over ourselves is far more glorious than any we have gained over our enemies.

The Old World abounded in predictions during our civil war that whatever its outcome the north and south would never be at peace; that with no natural boundaries, no walls of separation, we should be continually trespassing on each other's territory and incurring new causes of dissension. The predictions were plausible certainly. But many of those who took part in the strife, and are still in middle age, have seen its wounds healed and ancient foes converted into firm friends and political brothers. The union they have cemented with blood is immeasurably stronger than the confederation formed by their forefathers. And at each return of Memorial Day the bonds are renewed with fresh sympathy and added esteem.

Our war instead of imbedding us has mollified us; has enabled us to see each other without bias in the clear light of truth. The difference between the sections was caused by slavery, and slavery is forever extinct. The political education of the north and south had been diverse, and their moral ideas were to an extent the result thereof. Politically they were both right; and now they have the same moral point of view, which they could not have had before.

Memorial Day is, in the strictest sense, national, and the most conducive of all our holidays to preserve our nationality. Its value and its beauty can scarcely be over-estimated. It recalls the patriotic past, and assures the patriotic future. It is evidence of what we have done and promise of what we would do in like emergency. It is at once an example and a warning, a triumph and a consecration. The oftener we celebrate the day, the more important and precious it should be. In the next century it should assume a character almost sacred. We are yet too near the war to perceive its vast proportions and enormous consequence. We still lack the perspective for its proper apprehension.

Has any other country such a holiday? Other countries commemorate their victories. But we commemorate victory on one side and defeat on the other, and being the same people we regard the defeat as a victory, since it has led to a consolidation of our common heritage and our common interests. Latterly, too, we commemorate our reconciliation, which, greater than any feat of arms or skill of strategy, attests the advance and superiority of free institutions.

It is hard to conceive a higher moral spectacle than the day exhibits. In the north and in the south, where the Unionists and Confederates are buried, their graves are strewn with flowers alike, and equal honors are paid to their memory. Enslaves are pronounced by northern men on southern soldiers, and by southern men on northern soldiers. The past, with all its blood and sacrifice, is forgiven, if not forgotten, in a grand spirit of generosity and all embracing patriotism.

The heroes of a generation, passive, if not already past, praise and revere the heroes who gave their lives to a cause which was sacred to them, and which can never arise again, to separate and make absolute a brave, chivalrous and enlightened people. A war that can produce such results must have been a conscientious war, and must have been conducted on patriotic principles. It has no parallel in history; it is a proof of civilization; it is an indelible record of a new and most encouraging era which could not have been reached before the present century.

Wars generally, as has been often said, leave the nations engaged in them in far worse condition than they were at the outset. Our war was an exception. It was more than war for an idea; it was for a conviction, and in the interest of progress and morality. It left us, after the sacrifice of a million lives and incalculable treasure, infinitely better off in every way. The lives lost have entered into the national life, enlarging, purifying and elevating it beyond estimation. Not one of all the men who died has died in vain, which is always the best recompense for death, and one very rarely secured.

With such feelings as these we, of the north and south, observe and revere the day. It touches us to our depths and fills our souls with a mingled sentiment of sorrow and rejoicing—sorrow for what has gone, rejoicing for what has come and will remain. The day can never become commonplace or indifferent. It commemorates the true birth of our common country and the apparent perpetuity of its redeemed existence.

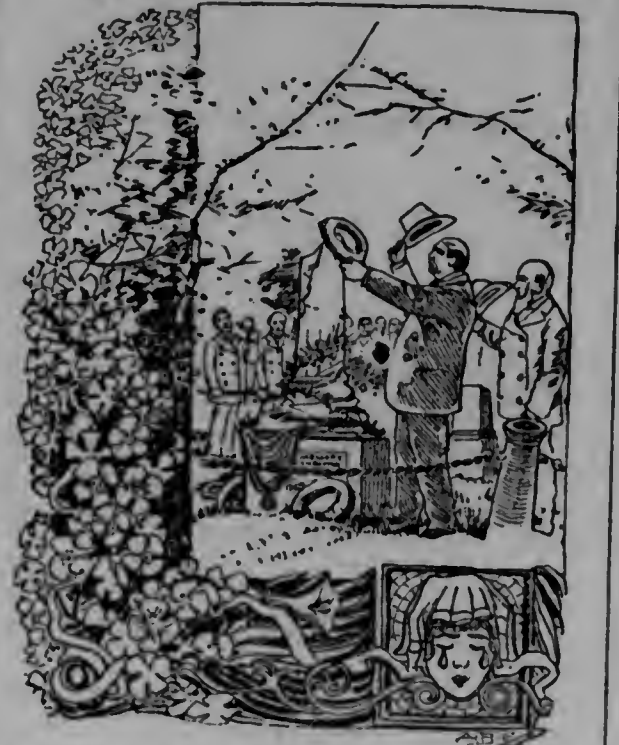

In the next century and the next it promises to be more impressive and stimulating than it is to us, whose fathers, brothers and sons are sleeping in the graves of a hundred battlefields. Our posterity will be sure to honor it and idealize it, as all devoted men and great deeds are apt to be idealized, and to follow the processions that decorate the mounds amid muffled drums, with hushed voices and tender hearts. Memorial Day bids fair to keep green, through unnumbered years, the memory of the truly heroic struggles and sacrifices that have constituted us Americans of America.

JUNUS HENRI BROWNE.

MEMORIAL DAY

O Springtime sweet! your loveliest bud and blossom
Shall over our sleeping heroes shed perfume:
A nation's grateful heart and warm affection
Shall twine the wreath to deck her patriots' tomb.

And they shall come—those gallant soldier brothers—
To these dear mounds, with slow and measured tread,
And see again the tent, the bivouac, the battle,
Which they had shared with their beloved dead.

With loving hands they'll place affection's garland
Upon those honored beds, where God's sweet peace Rests, and remains, till the last trump or bugle Shall to the sleeping soldier give release.

And they shall come, the widow and the orphan,
In faith and hope to plant "forgetmenot."
Proud of their martyr for life and country,
While tears of love bedew the hallowed spot.

Sleep on, ye glory crowned! Your loving debtors
Enjoy those blessings which your blood hath won:
Freedom and peace, the nation's preservation,
Is held most sacred by each sire and son.

Memorial Day! O be thou ever honored,
When all with grateful love shall tribute pay
To our dead heroes, now their work is ended!
O grateful nation, keep Memorial Day!

—Mrs. William Fawcett in Chicago Advance.

A Pet in Camp.

Here is a good illustration of the fact that the boys didn't put off their kindly human nature when they put on Uncle Sam's warlike blue.

One evening toward the close of the war, while Union soldiers lay in camp on a hillside near the Staunton river, Virginia, the cry of "Hail who goes there?" from a sentinel startled every longer to his feet, and several of the more curious ran to the guard line to find out what the trouble was. A minute later all knew that the night visitor who had been challenged was no enemy. A little girl about ten years of age, holding a white kitten in her arms, came forward into the light of the fires, conducted by two soldiers who had told the guard to pass her in, and who looked as proud as if they were escorting a queen.

The whole regiment gathered—including the colonel himself—to look at the child and hear her tell her story. A very short story it was, scarcely a paragraph, but there was matter enough in it for a full chapter. She lived near by with her father, who was sick and poor, and they were northerners, she said, and "Union folks." Her mother was dead and her brother had been killed while fighting in the Federal army. She "wanted to give something," and when the Union soldiers came she thought she would bring her pet kitten and present it to the colonel.

The colonel took the little girl in his arms and kissed her, and the kitten too, and said he was not a bit ashamed of his weakness. He accepted the kitten with thanks, and its innocent donor was gallantly waited on to her humble home, loaded with generous contributions.

The white kitten was adopted by the regiment, but considered the property and special pet of the colonel, and when the war was over he took it home with him. Like the white lamb that staid and fed with the victors after the battle of Antietam, that little creature, during its short but stirring army life, was a daily inspiration to better feelings and thoughts in the presence of all that is worst—a living flag of truce gleaming among the thunder-clouds of human passion and strife.—Harper's Young People.

After the Battle.

Another time when the old songs used to have a peculiarly touching effect was at night after a finished battle. As twilight died out and darkness came on, some one of our boys would begin to sing one of the Union songs. His mates would second him, and soon from away off across the line of camp fires and pickets, where we knew the enemy were, we would have "Dixie" or some other Confederate song "wafted back to us on the breeze. Song after song would be sent over the air in this manner from one contending camp to the other, but presently it would be all broken up by some soldier standing up "Home, Sweet Home." Both sides used to join in that in unison, as every mother's son remembered his good old home.

Young Old Vets.

The average age of veterans is fifty years, but that isn't old when veterans of ninety are not uncommon. There is General George Greene, a hero of Gettysburg, who commanded a brigade on that field at the age of sixty-one.

A Guess.

"What do you do when a woman asks you to guess her age?"
"I guess my guess to myself, knock off 30 per cent, and generally come near making myself adored."—Harper's Bazar.

THE PRICELESS RELIC

The Declaration of Independence Now Jealously Guarded in the Library of the State Department.

Gross Carelessness Had Characterized the Care Taken of the Precious Manuscript for Many Years.

The Names Have Nearly all Faded From Sight and Hancock's has Been Almost Entirely Effaced.

In one of the corridors of the senate wing of the Capitol is a statue in marble of John Hancock. On the granite pedestal is an inscription which reads, "He wrote his name where all nations should behold it, and all time shall not efface it."

This of course refers to the Revolutionary patriot whose bold signature appears conspicuously on the Declaration of Independence. The history of that period states that several of the signers, while sympathizing with the colonists in their struggle, were a little timid or hesitating about signing their names, as they would be punished as principals in the revolt in case the revolt be unsuccessful. Not so with Hancock. Grasping a goosequill and using plenty of ink he wrote his name at the top of the column. He wrote so boldly and distinctly that the name of John Hancock was as easily seen as an electric light on a dark night.

Every schoolboy is familiar with Hancock's handwriting, and as one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence the name of Hancock is familiar to a great many people who probably could not give the name of any other of the patriots who signed with him. Hence the sculptor or designer of the statue was led to declare that "He wrote his name where all time shall not efface it."

However true this may be as sentiment, the fact is that Hancock's name is now almost entirely effaced from the Declaration of Independence. It can be seen by the aid of a strong glass, but is so illegible that a stranger to the document or the style of handwriting would have difficulty in reading the name correctly.

Other names attached to the document have faded out entirely, and can no more be read than if they had never been written. Of the sixty or more names which were written, not more than ten can now be read, and they have faded to a pale, sickly color. As to the others, there are faint traces of writing, but nothing in the form of a signature can be distinguished sufficiently to enable any one to read them. Some are only partially obliterated, and by supplying missing characters and familiar with the document can make out the name which should be there, but no longer is, except in a very indistinct way.

Considering the priceless character of the Declaration of Independence as a historical document, it is astonishing that from the beginning proper care should not have been taken to preserve it from the ravages of time, and at least from misuse. During recent years it has been jealously guarded in the library of the department of state and precautions taken to prevent any further injury. It is now between two large plates of French glass, inclosed in a hard wood case, all of which is hermetically sealed, so as to keep out air and dust. No atmosphere or other influence can now reach the precious document, which in showing "a decent respect for the opinions of mankind proclaimed the reasons for the separation."

The handsome wooden case in which the Declaration is kept is in an upright position, fastened to a latched partition, with two doors in front opening outward. The doors open only far enough to view the document and exclude the light, except such as admitted by reflection. This is done out of abundance of caution, for it is doubtful if sunlight could affect it in its present condition, yet the present custodians are determined to spare no pains to prevent further damage.

The general belief of visitors to the library is that the fading of the document is probably due to a poor quality of ink used, and that such writing would naturally fade in the course of time. This is only partially true. There have been preserved specimens of colonial penmanship antedating the Declaration of Independence by many years, which are still clear and distinctly legible, and will continue legible for another generation. The present condition of the Declaration is due to misuse. Prior to 1877 it was kept at the interior department, and was guarded with less care than the event in the patent for a flour sifter.

No special effort was made to keep it from injury such as is now being done, and in 1876 it was loaned to the Philadelphia Centennial exposition and exhibited in Independence hall. During the Centennial year an attempt was made to take a letter press copy of it, which was successful in extracting much of the color from the writing, and in some places the writing shortly afterward disappeared altogether. It is hardly conceivable that so dangerous an expedient should have been attempted merely to gratify the people who desired facsimiles. It could only damage the original and give no promise that the copies could be satisfactory. It is unlikely that the Declaration of Independence will ever again be placed on exhibition in connection with any event, no matter how important.

By an executive order it is to remain in the state department and will not be loaned for any purpose, no matter how worthy. The custodian believes that there will be no further fading of the document as long as it remains undisturbed, but to him and to every visitor it is a matter of regret that the attempt to make a letter press copy should have been permitted. It looks worse than some of the manuscripts in the British museum which are three times as old.—Washington Cor. Milwaukee Wisconsin.

His Contempt.
I remember an occasion when Judge Black got the worst of an encounter with Thad Stevens," said Judge Stevens. "The former was chief justice of Pennsylvania and the other had a case before the court. The chief justice was addressing some remarks to Mr. Stevens, who turned his back and commenced pacing up and down the chamber, to the great annoyance of Judge Black, who thundered out, 'Mr. Stevens, are you trying to show your contempt for this court?' 'No, sir,' was the answer, 'I'm trying to conceal it.'"—Washington Post.

How a Post Spent His Evenings.
Prior, one of our best minor poets, whiled away his evenings at a low public house in Long Acre, chatting with an old soldier and his shrewish helpmate.—London Hygiene.

Who Was Merely Thinking.

"May I cherish a hope, Ella dear, that you will become my wife, the partner of my joys and sorrows, my constant companion through this vale of tears?"
Miss Spudkins did not answer. Her fair head was slightly bent. The color came and went on her dainty cheeks. Her hands were clasped and lay upon her lap.
Mr. Snodgrass seized one of them passionately and kissed it. Then he spoke again. "This avowal of love cannot come to you as a surprise, Ella. My devotion to you knows no bounds. It has fathomless depth and an unmeasurable height. Do you not return it in some measure?"
Still Miss Spudkins spoke not. Her eyes seemed to be studying the pattern of the carpet.

"Will you not but speak the word which shall betroth our souls for all time and for all eternity? I feel, my precious one, as though we were predestined for each other, and that our love will last while ceaseless ages roll. Tell me you love me, darling."

She did not tell him and Mr. Snodgrass resumed:
"We have known each other since we were children, Ella dear. This is no sudden fancy of mine. I loved you when you were learning to talk, and my love deepened and strengthened as you gradually acquired that accomplishment. Now my affection is one that has gathered strength through the years until it will not be denied. It will not take no for an answer. Ella, love, why don't you reply? Speak the word which will make me the happiest of mortals."

Yet there was no answer from the fair young girl at whose feet was thus laid the heart of a brave young man; and Mr. Snodgrass once more addressed her:
"I know that silence gives consent, but I'd rather hear from your lips the little yes to my plea. Why do you not answer me?"

"I was thinking, Thomas," Ella replied at last, and there was ineffable tenderness in her tones. "Of course I love you. I think you were reasonably sure of that, dear, but I was thinking."—And again the far away look came in her eyes.
"Thinking of what, dear?"
"I was thinking whether I would better have my visiting cards engraved 'Mrs. E. Spudkins Snodgrass' or 'Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Snodgrass.' Which is the more stylish, dear?"—William Henry Switzer in Harper's Bazar.

Cheap Housekeeping.
At a time when Rosebud, the late actor at the Odeon theater, could not afford to give a supper to his children, this is how he persuaded them to go to bed without having anything to eat.
"Here's a penny for each of you that will do without my supper," he would say to them. They all accepted the bargain. Next morning they were as hungry as wolves. Their father then called out, "Those that want their breakfast must pay a penny."
He thus recovered his expenses and saved a meal.—Arlington.

Music Hath Charms.
"Does it hurt, Jim?"
"Yes, rather, but I suppose I'll have to stand it for the concert."
—Life.

Not the Right Sort.
He—You know I don't approve of tight lacing in women. I think such constant pressure around the waist is highly injurious.
She—I don't think that is what makes it so bad.
He—What is it then?
She (toying with her fan)—It is because that method is so artificial.—Cloak Review.

A Revised Version.
"That's a great motto," said Dr. B. Billins to a real estate man who asks "Why pay rent when you can own your own home?"
"Yes," was the reply, "but I have just had a tenant who rented it in a way that made me dislike it. He says why pay for a home when you can owe the rent money?"

Different Opinions.
"I don't think Mr. Bunker is much of a conversationalist," observed Miss Elder. "Well, he called on me last night," replied Miss Young, as she carelessly twirled a new ring on the third finger of her left hand, "and I found his conversation quite engaging."—Truth.

Meant Well.
A shoemaker hung out a new sign and then wondered what passers by found so amusing. His sign ran:
"Don't go elsewhere to be swindled. Walk in here."—Tit-Bits.

Not Far Wrong.
A rather absentminded physician had to make out a certificate of death. Under the heading, "Cause of death," he unconsciously wrote his own name—Tageliche Handschud.

A Short Farewell.
He—Farewell.
She—Farewell. Will you ever call again?
He—Tomorrow night.—Brooklyn Life.

The Appointed Day.
From where the broad Pacific Breaks in foam upon its strand To the shores whereon Atlantic Waters roll in billows grand, From the broad spread inland waters Of the lake chain in the north To where tepid equatorial Currents warm the flowery south, Now the songster's voice is still And each valley and each hill And the sportive breezes with expectancy are laden, For the birthday's here again Of la belle Americaine, The divine, angelic, exquisite, poetic summer maiden.

SAVED THE ENGINEER.

Harry Miller, an engineer stopping at the Norris House, at 112 East Superior street, this city, has been afflicted for four or five years with loss of self-confidence, nervousness, sleeplessness, pain in the head and back, flabbiness of the muscles and cold clammy sweats and was, at the time he began treatment with Dr. Speer, four months ago, a total wreck, both in his physical and nervous system. FORCED TO WRITE.

Blaine was Compelled by Harrison to Indite That Famous Letter of Withdrawal.

He Wrote to Prevent a Row and the Disruption of the Party.

Having Performed This Duty He Is Now Willing to Accept the Nomination.

CHICAGO, May 30.—A Tribune special from Detroit, Mich., says: Capt. William A. Gavett, for more than twenty years one of Mr. Blaine's most confidential friends and trusted political advisers, last night gave one of the most important contributions to the political literature of the country yet made during this campaign. Of Mr. Gavett's standing with and understanding of Mr. Blaine's feelings and wishes there is not the slightest question. During Mr. Gavett's recent visit to Washington he saw Mr. Blaine daily and with him discussed every phase of the political situation.

"I have the greatest desire," said Capt. Gavett last night, "that some one of Blaine's trusted friends should put before the public the inside facts relative to his so-called withdrawal letter. While I don't propose to quote Mr. Blaine, nor claim to have his authority so to do, I stand upon my own responsibility, based upon the most reliable information entrusted to me, that Mr. Blaine only wrote the letter he did upon the urgent request, in fact the demand of the president, after mature consideration."

"While the letter was not what the president wanted it was all Mr. Blaine could consent to grant. It did not say that the president ought to be renominated, or express a preference for any other candidate. It did not say anything about Mr. Blaine's health, and it did not say that Mr. Blaine would decline the nomination provided the convention in its wisdom saw fit to select him. None of these omissions from that letter were accidental. Had Mr. Blaine issued that stand aside upon the urgent demand of his immediate superior officer, the president, Mr. Blaine's self respect, if nothing else, would have forced him to retire from the cabinet, a position which he did not care a rap for."

"It would then have been announced that there was a split in the Republican party. Contests would have followed in every district and state convention in the country and if a large majority of the delegates had been selected in favor of Blaine, the president and his friends might have claimed that the president had not been re-elected, and the party would have been divided into two camps, one to which he had been entitled by reason of his position. Now the delegates have all been chosen without the interference or influence of Mr. Blaine. Hence it will be at once realized when these facts are considered, that Mr. Blaine's great magnanimity in consent to stand aside and let the president secure the nomination if he could, has saved the party from possible disruption and paved the way to victory, although the sacrifice Mr. Blaine made seemed at the time to have robbed himself of the great honor he so richly earned. I give it as my best judgment that Mr. Blaine will accept the nomination by the grandest letter ever written by an American statesman."

A GREAT CHAIR.

Presiding Officer of the Minneapolis Convention Will Sit In It.

The Webster chair factory of Superior, which secured the contract for making the chairs for the national Republican convention at Minneapolis, 7000 in all, has made a beautiful one for the man who shall be selected to be presiding officer. It is made of oak and the seat is 23 by 21 inches. The heavy oak arms which will be upholstered in leather, stand twenty-five inches above the floor, while the seat is only sixteen inches from the floor. Carved on the end of each arm is a face. On the right arm the face bears a smile, while on the left the expression is the reverse—probably emblematic of victory and defeat. The seat and back as well as the arms will be upholstered in leather. Decidedly the most novel part of the chair is its back. Two pillars nicely engraved stand 2 1/2 feet above the arms. Upon the oak cross beam the word "Minneapolis" is engraved. An eagle with spreading wings, perched upon a shield, stands in the middle of the cross bar. On the right of the eagle is a sheaf of wheat; on the left three four barrels. Two engraved arms also stand at the ends of the bar, which set the chair off handsomely. Upon the shield are the words, "National Republican Convention, 1892." The work was all done by hand. The chair is therefore very expensive. It will not cost less than $300. The design was made by William Wickes of South Superior.

Thanks the Scholars.
At a meeting of Joshua P. Culver post Saturday evening the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That this post expresses its enthusiastic thanks to the principal, teachers and scholars of our public schools for the opportunity and privilege of meeting with them in the patriotic exercises of Friday, the 27th inst. We rejoice that the pure flame of patriotism burns in the hearts of our youth, undiminished fervor, and believe that such gatherings will effectively foster the spirit which animated us in our country's service. Our departed dead can never be forgotten while their deeds, sufferings and death are followed by the affections and glorified by the imitations of our public schools.

Resolved, That copies hereof be sent Superintendent Denfeld and the press of our city.

Contagious.
Everybody has a good word to say for The Herald nowadays. Its news in every department is beyond compare, its circulation increases rapidly and its advertising patronage, too.

PAIRED OUR HIGH SCHOOL.

Address in Boston By Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer.

Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer, who recently visited Duluth and delivered an address at Hardy Hall, was given a reception on her return to Boston, by the Massachusetts Society for the University Education of Women. Mrs. Palmer gave a brief address on "The Opportunity for Higher Education in the West." She spoke of the important industries of the West, of its wealth and population. The children are especially bright and quick to learn she said. The high schools are of the first class, but opportunities for higher education are rather limited. The alumni expect the legislature to appropriate sufficient money for support of the state universities and do not contribute themselves. But no legislature can understand the amounting need for the support of instruction in the higher branches.

The university of Minnesota, she said, has been very fortunate both in securing good professors and plenty of funds, and now in the eighth year of its existence numbers 1400 pupils. The university of Michigan has grown to be the largest university in the country, numbering 3200 students. All its departments are overworked. This university was one of the first to admit students on certificates from high schools, thus making the way easy and raising the standard of the schools. All the privileges of these universities, also that of Chicago to be, have been made open to men and women alike. Thus they have set a good example to universities of Massachusetts and other Eastern states which have been a little slow in this respect. In the course of her address Mrs. Palmer spoke of the flatness of the new high school building in Duluth, and gave the educational facilities of this city a good advertisement.

AMUSEMENTS.

Hallen and Hart.

Hallen and Hart tickled a good audience at the Temple Saturday night in their musical farce comedy, "Later On." The musical features and the dancing are practically the whole show. Hallen and Hart are as clever and dance as lightly as ever. Clara Tropp, the soubrette, is an unusually fine dancer, and is seemingly as light as a feather. The dancing was all very good. John E. McWade, the baritone, is still with the company and his voice is better than ever. George O'Donnell's bass solos were excellent and deserved the encores they received. Several features were cut owing to the fact that the company had to leave on the midnight train.

Among these was Molly Fuller's serpentine dance, which was so greatly admired. Although but very few people knew it, several of the songs which were sung Saturday night are those which will be introduced in Hallen and Hart's new play, "The Idea," which they bring out next Monday night. One or two of the characters, also were those which will appear in the new play. "The Idea," it is said, will give Messrs. Hallen and Hart better opportunities for employing their talent. Their work in "Later On" is excellent, but one cannot but feel that they are capable of better things.

The "Spider and Fly" will please the patrons of the Temple tonight. Of its appearance in Minneapolis the Journal says:

The "Spider and the Fly" is a burlesque pantomime which is bound to cause pleasure and loud reverberations of laughter wherever it is presented. The Bijou last evening was crowded to the guards with people who came to be amused and were not only amused but surprised with fun. Miss Lou Royce as the queen of mermaids is pretty and graceful enough to charm a neophyte, and sings, moreover, so sweetly that she holds her audience entranced all the time. The Thurgood sisters also deserve praise for their unique and bewitching dancing and not enough can be said of the fascination they lend to the play. The comedian is Chas. H. Kenney, and he is just as funny as a funny man can be. He has an incongruous part, but incongruity as well as brevity is the soul of wit, and he leaves nothing to be desired. The Putnam Twins as respectively the Spider and Fly, are as cunning and as fascinating as two such pretty girls of exactly the same age can not help being, and every time they appear they are greeted with warmest applause. The clown, Messrs. Fort and Morris, are exceptionally good, and the contortionist who does a one arm act is way out of sight.

The chorus is good, and the evolutions of the corymbes are better than has been seen. As a whole the "Spider and the Fly" is an amusing show and ought to be well patronized.

"Boccaccio" Wednesday Evening.

Wednesday evening the Jeannie Winston Opera company opens at the Temple in "Boccaccio." This company is a brilliant one. It numbers forty people in all and is under the immediate direction of Manager S. W. Fort, of Baltimore, who has had twelve consecutive years' experience in producing comic opera in Eastern cities and has achieved great success. Notwithstanding that this organization is a very large and very expensive one, the management have decided to play the engagement in this city at the usual prices of the theater.

Will Carleton, Lyceum theater, June 4

Works to Perfection.

The Steam shovel started loading cars at the Chandler mine at Ely last Wednesday morning, and would now be in shape to keep three or four engines busy if the cars could be had. The shovel could load 150 cars of ore per day of ten hours, the average time per car is just four minutes. At present the shipment from the Chandler is 200 cars per day. This could easily be thrified without any trouble if cars could be obtained fast enough.

IT RUCK A COW.

The St. Louis Express on the Santa Fe Road Was Thrown From the Track.

The Engineer was Killed and Several of the Passengers Were Badly Hurt.

A Bad and Fatal Wreck on the Texas Pacific Caused by a Washout.

LEWISTON, Ill., May 30.—Train No. 16, bound for Chicago on the Santa Fe road, struck a cow and a calf at the edge of the bridge a mile west of Lewiston at 8 o'clock last night. The train left the track and the engine and tender kept on the ties until fairly on the bridge when they toppled into the river, the cars rolling about half way down the sloping bank. The engineer was killed and several of the passengers hurt. The list of killed and injured follows:

Killed—W. A. Isbell, engineer; Armour Flats, thirty-third and Dearborn street, Chicago, aged 35 years.

Injured.—J. J. Allen, No 236 South Clark street, slightly injured in one leg; Mrs. Maria A. Bissell of 631 Fullerton avenue, Chicago, back injured; J. E. Egman, 727 Sangamon street, slightly injured; Chas. Fanning, 414 Clybourne avenue, scalp wounds; Mrs. Belle Freely, 617 Wabash avenue, injuries to spine and head; Miss Hulda Fricke, of 2939 Deering street, spinal injuries; Maggie Kilpatrick, of 6518 Vernon avenue, hurt about hips and legs; Mrs. R. M. Quigley of 722 Pine street, St. Louis, Mo., spinal injuries; Chas. M. Welch, Thirty-Ninth street and Forest avenue, knee injured; Chris Slossan, of Streeter, Ills, fireman, leg and arm crushed.

The train is known as the St. Louis express, leaving the town from which it takes its name at 7:45 o'clock in the morning. It is due at Chicago at 7:35. Its schedule time at this place is 6:27. Three cars constituted the train, a baggage car, smoking car and chair car. Most of the persons badly hurt were in the chair car, which was the rear coach of the train. A brakeman proceeded to Lemont and a relief train was sent to the wreck.

A Bad Wreck.

PARIS, Tex., May 30.—Yesterday morning a stock train on the Texas Pacific road, ran into a washout near Moor Springs, Fireman Wm. Hope was fatally injured. Brakeman E. A. Boyle was severely hurt. Two negroes, stealing a ride on the trucks, were terribly crushed and cannot live. Eight cars were totally wrecked and over fifty head of cattle were killed.

Killed his Wife.

GREENUP, Ky., May 30.—Three miles south of Willard, yesterday Austin Porter stabbed and killed his wife, Ollie Porter. They parted one year ago. Porter came to the house of his father-in-law, entered by a window and stabbed her while a sleep. She died in a few minutes. Porter will be lynched if caught.

Charged With Lynching.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 30.—Six men are in jail at Cullerton, charged with participating in lynching. This is the first time in the recent history of Alabama that any member of a mob has been interfered with by legal process. The victims were two white men, Monroe J. Ivens and his son, John, several months ago.

Disastrous Storm.

BROWNSVILLE, Ind., May 30.—A most disastrous rain and electric storm passed through Jackson county Thursday night. Thousands of acres of fine wheat were destroyed by wind and hail. Fruit was destroyed. J. D. Johnson and Levy Miller, laborers on the farm of Marion Thomson, was killed by lightning.

A BIG BUGABOO.

Kendall's Followers Trying to Prove That Col. Graves Is Weak.

Col. Graves' candidacy is progressing very favorably and his supporters are becoming more and more satisfied every day that the right man has been brought into the field. The congratulations upon his candidacy and assurances of support which he is receiving every day indicate that he has a great reserve strength in the district and will make a brilliant run.

The supporters of Mr. Kendall are going to considerable trouble to endeavor to convince each other that Col. Graves would be a weak candidate in the district especially in the lower end. This is entirely wrong. One third of the present congressional district was in Col. Graves' old legislative district in which he was so popular and his service in the legislature made him stronger when he retired than when he went in. He has many strong friends all over the district and is hearing from them every day and one and all say that they are working for him.

Col. Graves, in striking contrast to the Kendall following, is working quietly and with very little noise and his friends are doing all in their power to forward his canvass.

Arranging Excursions.

A special meeting of the Jobbers' union was held last Saturday and the plan of Messrs. Brown & Jordan, who are endeavoring to float the stock of a wholesale grocery company which they are organizing, was endorsed. The union also discussed the question of arranging for excursions to Duluth during the Minneapolis convention.

No charge for baby carriages on the incline.

MEMORIAL DAY.

THE SLEEPING SOLDIER.

Once more in dreams he lives the past,
And, 'mid the battle's raging flames,
He leads his comrades on to carve
The record of their deathless names.

Sleep on, O dreamer of today,
And fight once more thy battles won.
Thy brothers rest in grass-grown graves;
Thy work and theirs has been well done.

But we, who, waking, now look back
And link our memories with the past
By strewing flowers upon the graves
Of them whose fame shall ever last.

We know that flowers shall lose their bloom
And idle dreams shall swiftly fade;
But in our hearts, in blood, is writ
The sacrifice our heroes made.

THE WIDOW'S BOYS.

A MEMORIAL DAY STORY.

(Copyright, 1892, by American Press Association.)

N THE Kentucky side of the Ohio river, a little above Maysville, is a farm long and well known as the "Stewart place." For forty years this fine farm has been managed by the "Widow Stewart," who in this year of grace 1892 is still an active woman, though in her seventy-sixth year.

Mrs. Stewart—her maiden name was Manning—was born in Ohio, as her husband had been in Kentucky, but only the width of the river separated their birthplaces, which were plainly visible to the one from the other, yet her neighbors, after marriage, spoke of her as a "northern woman" and of her husband as a "southern man."

In 1850 Mrs. Stewart was left a widow with two boys, the one, Frank, eleven and a half years old, the other, George, just ten. Still young and energetic, Mrs. Stewart said to the friends who called to console with her on her bereavement:

"My husband left me above want; henceforth my life object shall be to train up my sons that they may be worthy their father," and religiously and heroically she kept that resolution.

Although there was eighteen months' difference in the ages of the boys, they looked so much alike that strangers believed they were twins, and the brothers had the same attachment for each other that distinguishes children of the same birth.

Frank and George Stewart went to the same school, played the same games, read the same books, slept in the same bed and had the same aspirations, till at length they came to resemble each other as much as do the reflections of the stars in the brooks.

Still the mother and intimate friends saw a difference in the undercurrent of the Stewart boys' characters.

Frank was quite steady, self-contained and slow to anger, and while yet a child he showed a knowledge of the future's needs and a desire to help his mother that every one considered remarkable in one of his years.

George was mentally quicker and brighter, stronger in his prejudices and more outspoken and impulsive in the manifestations of his likes, but even those who noticed these differences regarded them as trivial compared with the many and stronger points of resemblance.

Soon after her husband's death Mrs. Stewart adopted the orphaned daughter of a distant cousin of hers, Dora Stewart, who looked upon the boys as a sister, until the time came, in 1861, when, as a beautiful girl of eighteen, she began to attract the attention of the gallant youths along the river.

Mrs. Stewart had ever treated Dora as a daughter, and the girl repaid her with a devoted daughter's love; but a time came when the brothers ceased to regard her as a sister, and the widow, with a great anxiety in her heart, saw that both her sons had fallen in love with the same fair object.

With a full appreciation of the utility of his efforts, Frank tried to cheer his mother and Dora, and with more energy and care, if that were possible, he gave himself up to the duties of the farm.

Now and then, through the underground mail, a letter full of love came through from George, and replies were sent through the same medium. At length, it was the summer of 1862, there came a day when the Confederate cavalry were sweeping north to the Ohio, making fugitives or recruits of all the men capable of bearing arms along their line of march.

"Mother," said Frank, as one evening he sat between her and Dora on the side piazza that commanded a splendid view of the broad river, "I have always said that I would never leave you and Dora till the Confederates forced me to fly, and that then I would take service with the Union. John Morgan's troops are only five hours away. Tomorrow morning they will water their horses down there. Our neighbors know my feelings. You will be safer if I am away, so I will go, leaving you to God."

Mrs. Stewart was not unprepared for this, yet her heart was pierced as with a dagger and she bowed her head on her hands.

A sense of loyalty to his brother had kept Frank from telling Dora of his love, and up to this moment her preference had been concealed, but now she tried to rise and reach out to him her restraining arms, but uttered in the effort, and with a cry of agony on her white lips fell at his feet like one dead.

The next day Morgan's gray horsemen were down by the river, and Frank Stewart was mustered into the service of the Union. And now, no matter which side lost or won, there was no rejoicing in the hearts of these two women.

They drew apart from the world, but this only intensified their interest in the terrible contest. The Union people were still rejoicing over the victory at Missionary Ridge, when one day a message came to Mrs. Stewart from Nashville. It said:

"Your son George, who fell into our hands desperately wounded before Chattanooga, is here and wishes to see you."

The widow and Dora knew what that meant. They hurried to Louisville, received passes and took the cars for Nashville.

They found the hospital, and the doctor who had sent the message led them to a cot on which lay a man bronzed and bearded. The hue of death was on the face, and the quick rise and fall of the broad breast told that the end was near.

And George Stewart heard moaning and felt the touch of hot lips on his cold cheeks, and opening his glazing eyes he saw kneeling, on either side of the cot, his mother and Dora.

"God bless you for coming!" he gasped. "He was dead within the hour, and his last words were:

"Tell brother I love him—and bless him with my dying breath!"

One beautiful moonlit night, as Frank was walking slowly and thoughtfully home from the village, where he had been to learn the particulars of the crossing of the Union troops into Kentucky under Roseau and Nelson, themselves some of the dark and bloody ground, he heard the galloping of an approaching horse and caught the glint of the moon on a polished rifle barrel.

The horseman drew rein beside him. It was George.

"The time is here, Frank," said George huskily, as he sprang to the ground with the rifle at his back and laid his hands on his brother's shoulders.

Frank did not ask for an explanation. He knew that the dreaded hour had come and that his brother, whom he loved better than he did his own life, was about to take sides with the cause that he hated.

"Have you told mother?" asked Frank.

"Yes. God pity her, brother, for she needs his comfort tonight; but I felt that I could not remain back longer and be a man."

I know how you feel, Frank, and I respect you, but you are sturdier than I am or ever can be, and you will care for her and the place till the war is over or you learn that I am not to come back.

Dora—I have long kept the secret to myself, but I felt tonight that I could not leave without opening my heart to her and telling her that I have long loved her, but not as a brother."

"And what did she say, George?" asked Frank.

"She answered only with tears and supplications for me to remain—to remain and be as happy as of old, but I feel that that can never be. But for my sake, for her sake, Frank, I know you will care for her. And now, may God have you ever in his keeping."

George Stewart threw his arms about his brother's neck, kissed him, then swung into the saddle and galloped away in the direction of the south.

The pounding of the iron hoofs struck on Frank's heart and held him there in agony till they died out in a faint echo across the moonlit hills; then he went to death had fallen on the shadow of the river.

With a full appreciation of the utility of his efforts, Frank tried to cheer his mother and Dora, and with more energy and care, if that were possible, he gave himself up to the duties of the farm.

Dr. Speer & Co., West Superior, Wis.: Gentlemen—According to the promise I gave I forward you a testimonial of the troubles I had.

I, George H. Thompson, make the following statement regarding the skill of Dr. Speer & Co., whose marvelous cures have won them a high reputation as successful physicians: To whom it may concern: For a long time I had been a constant sufferer from catarrh of the bladder, accompanied by pains in the back, loss of flesh and what is worse that feeling of making life a complete burden. I treated with several different physicians without obtaining any relief, and had almost abandoned hope, when I was prompted to seek the advice of a specialist. Accordingly, in June last, I consulted Dr. Speer & Co., placed myself in their care and now I am happy to say that I am completely cured, thanks to their skillful treatment. Any further information will be gladly furnished to all who may feel interested.

Saved the Engineer.

Harry Miller, an engineer stopping at the Norris House in Duluth, has been afflicted for four or five years with loss of self-confidence, with nervousness, sleeplessness, pain in the head and back, flabbiness of the muscles and cold, clammy sweats, and was, at the time he began treatment with Dr. Speer four months ago, a total wreck, both in his physical and nervous system. He is now wholly recovered and stands ready to go before any Justice of the Peace and swear to the facts above set forth. Dr. Speer's office is in the New York Block in West Superior.

Sixteen miles south of Salisbury, in Rowan county, N. C., is situated the little village of Enochville. Its name was taken from a Lutheran church called St. Enoch. There are eighteen white families in this village and two colored families. These are industrious, honest people, but have ways peculiarly their own. They believe strictly in walking in the ways their fathers trod, which has passed into a joke. Enochville is an old German and Dutch settlement, and Dutch habits cling to the people, most of the older members of whom speak very broken English.

Persons going to this village must be initiated into their mode of living and speaking. Scarcely any household articles are called by their real German or real English names, and fresh arrivals from Germany or Holland would not understand their language, which is so peculiarly their own. Their proper names are Riederhous, Congenhouer, Eisenhour, Langenhous, Probst, Test, Cloffelder, Fouts, Edlienen, Wincoff, etc. Their given names are the ordinary run of Mary, William and John.

They express themselves in this wise: A man going to Concord or Salisbury says, "I want to get back till dinner tomorrow." Ask any of them if they have seen the bride. They will say, "Oh, yes; I've eaten some of the cake yet." And, "I have been to shovels before now a'body." I have in mind a young man who has received first grade certificates in four counties, and he says, "I have saw," and, "If you don't make your hungry robe in you'll be lovin' it directly." This same young man rides and drives pretty horses, dresses well and has his necktie of the latest tint.

The people of Enochville cook in old Dutch ovens; they clean them out with a long pole with wet cloths on the end. This pole the old people call huttelweiss, the young ones butter. Dried apples are called scuffs, from the German schnitz. These ovens bake pies beautifully, and this is very a land of pies—pies for breakfast, dinner and supper. It is no unusual thing to find five or six different kinds of pies on the table of the poorest people. These people have plenty to eat, and they enjoy it, but they prepare some rare dishes. Dried fruit of any kind is boiled with meat, pastry with cabbage—dumplings they call them. Coffee is made in this way: Some coffee is put into the pot, which is filled up with water and allowed to boil while the rest of the meal is in preparation. Next day they put in more coffee and more water and boil again, and so continue until the pot is about as heavy as lead, when emptying takes place and the process is renewed.

Everybody does manual labor, and the women work in the fields with the men. It is a common sight to see women plowing and binding wheat, or splitting rails, or hoeing, or hauling wood. The girls frequently marry at about fourteen years of age, and one such tells this story: She takes her baby to the woods, and cuts four cords of wood a day, besides cooking the meals. This woman has seven or eight children. Her husband is well to do, having land, wages, etc. The men have labor saving machines, such as horsecars, moving and reaping machines, wheat drills and feed cutters. The women also have sewing machines and cooking stoves. It is a hard place for women. They have no housekeepers. One young woman just twenty-one years of age has been since the age of eleven doing the washing, scouring, ironing and sewing for a family of seven. When she tells her father she is indisposed and wishes for help he replies she has nothing to do but sit around the house all day. They pride themselves upon their Jersey stock of cows. Mr. Deal milks twenty Jersey cows, has large barns, water supplied by a windmill, several farms, a store, grain and sawmill and a cotton gin, and his wife and mother go barfooted in the summer. In dress they are up to the latest styles, have silks, feathers and goldbeaded umbrellas all for nothing. There are fifteen organs in eighteen homes—A. George in New York Sun.

Cigar Buyers.
"Give me three good cigars," he said, throwing down a dollar. The dealer handed out three cigars and seventy-five cents in change, which the customer pocketed and then walked away. "How did you know he wanted three-for-a-quarter cigars?" I asked. "Why," answered the dealer, "he said good cigars, didn't he?" "Yes, but those are not the best cigars you have." "Course not, but fellows always say good cigars when they want three for a quarter. If they want higher priced cigars they walk up to the counter and call out the name of the brand or the price they want to pay, so's everybody can hear them."

"They say: 'Some of your Perfectos, please,' or 'Are these Garcias fresh?' or 'Your best imported brand,' or 'Three of the usual kind,' or something like that. If they want five cent cigars, they walk in quietly and tap the case over the box containing the kind they want without saying a word, and if they want twofers or stogies they come in slyly when there is no one else around. But when a fellow wants plain three for a quarter he just steps up and says, 'Three good ones,' and every cigar man knows what he means."—Brandon Buckshaw.

The Zest of Hunting.
You can never know the zest of hunting or fishing until your dinner depends upon your success; you have never attained the sublime in cooking until you have spitted your fish or meat on a freshly peeled stick, rubbed the salt in with your fingers and rolled it over a woodland fire, you watching it jealously lest it get ablaze, and all the time that meat is browning you get hungrier and hungrier, and every time it sputters in the glow you catch wafts of fragrance, until you feel that you have the capacity of a dozen starving men and wonder whether a single haunch of venison can supply your wants.—St. Nicholas.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Again the people of the United States have paused in the mad whirl of business to pay a tribute of respect to the memories of the heroic dead. The graves of those who fought and died to save the Union from dismemberment and to produce and perpetuate a compact and united nation have been covered over with beautiful flowers and their virtues have been lauded in verse and prose. In nearly every city and village in the land special exercises have been held and the whole people have taken part in the ceremonies connected with the day.

Memorial Day originally was kept only by the Grand Army, but it has grown into a national festival. It has become a festival to celebrate loyal heroism. It has brought the whole nation face to face with its heroes, and it has caused the spirit of patriotism to burn more brightly in many a breast. It is a custom that will be perpetuated. The ranks of the Grand Army are growing thinner every year. The veterans are dropping off, and succeeding years will witness a still more rapid decrease in their numbers. But the nation will maintain the commemoration of their deeds, and succeeding generations will learn on the anniversaries of this day to revere the memory and admire the deeds of those who sacrificed so much for home and country.

THE MONEY MARKET.

The New York stock market has during the past week shown symptoms of a reaction from its late "bearish" drift, due to the improved financial conditions. The net earnings of railroads for the first quarter of the year proved to have increased nearly 10 per cent over those of the same time of last year; and although the current business of many of the Western roads in showing some decline, yet the reduction is merely the temporary effect of the storms and the impassable condition of country roads. The reserves of the New York city banks are again on the increase, the surplus shown in last week's statement being $10,500,000 against $5,200,000 a year previous. The exports of gold have ceased for now two weeks, although at this season we are usually shipping that metal. The current demand for bond investments is unusually active, and the scarcity in the supply was strikingly apparent in the fact that the bids for the $10,000,000 of Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis 4 1/2% marketed last week amounted to several times the sum offered.

In these facts, concludes Henry Clews, the New York banker, in his last weekly financial review, we have a strong combination of conditions favoring the market, and their bearing on prices is the more important because there are now apparently left so few factors in the situation of an unfavorable character. There is likely, however, to be some waiting until the cardinal question of crop prospects is more settled. The news of the West and Southwest becomes each day more assuring; and so far as respects wheat, all that can be claimed is that a good crop is possible, dependent on the prevalence of fine weather from this time forth. As to Indian corn the season of planting is doubtless late, and in that case there is always a liability to the crop being caught by frost. With another two weeks of fine weather, the wheat crop will probably become an important "bull" element in stocks.

The European situation continues to gradually improve. London shows more confidence in American stocks. A considerable portion of the new loan of the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis railroad was taken on that market, which brings out a considerable supply of sterling bills of exchange. Specie is piling up in the Bank of England, and the rate for money in the open market is now 1 per cent. At all the continental centers there is a glut of money, which must sooner or later stimulate the demand for investments and develop speculation. The political atmosphere is calmer, and although it is momentarily disturbed by the financial situation in Italy, yet the curtailment of that government's military expenditures, which seems inevitable, ought to be a contribution towards public confidence. The forthcoming international silver conference does not yet excite here the interest which Mr. Clews thinks, its importance seems to warrant; partly because the public get little information about the matter and the progress of the negotiations, and partly because the unfriendly tone assumed towards it by a portion of the British press moderates expectations of full and complete success as a result of the negotiations. At present, it would be premature to indulge in any estimates of the probable outcome of the conference, so little being certainly known as to the real attitude of the several governments participating in it and the personnel of the delegates. The deliberations however will be of incalculable value as showing what is possible and impossible in the way of arrangements for remedying the depreciation and demonetization of silver. To the United States, the conference will prove invaluable, even should it show that no such arrangements are possible; for then it would be the more distinctly apparent what is the sole course to be pursued for conserving our own monetary system.

A POPULAR "SCHEME."

The Tribune of this morning says: "To fair minded Republicans the candidacy of Col. Graves for congress looks like a simple scheme to endeavor to defeat Hon. H. C. Kendall." Well, what else could the Tribune or anyone else suppose it? Does it imagine that the large and reputable body of Republicans in Duluth, who have induced Col. Graves to become a candidate, are also trying to secure the nomination of Mr. Kendall? When the votes at the primaries next Thursday evening are counted, the Tribune and the other Kendall boomers will find that it is exactly what it has said—a "scheme," and a successful one, too, to defeat H. C. Kendall and secure the Republican nomination for Col. Charles H. Graves, who is the better man for the position. Of course such a "scheme" may be, in the estimation of the Tribune, highly reprehensible, but a great number of the Republicans of St. Louis county—a majority, in fact, according to the Herald's figuring, believe that it is a scheme whose complete success is, for the sake of both the county and the party, "a consummation devoutly to be wished." The encouraging reports received by the friends of Col. Graves from all parts of the county show that the sentiment in his favor is widespread and is gaining in strength every day.

HURTING THEMSELVES.

Careful reading of the reports of the testimony submitted by the Minneapolis millers to the interstate commerce commission, in support of the charges against the railroads of discriminating in favor of Duluth, shows that the millers make out a very weak case. It is questionable, indeed, if the proceedings taken against the railroads by the Minneapolis people will not have a boomerang effect and injure themselves. The testimony which they offered was a succession of declarations that unless the present freight rates are changed, Minneapolis' decadence as a milling center will be increased, while there will be a correspondingly rapid growth in the milling industry at Duluth. If the commission decides that no discrimination exists now, and the railroads maintain the present rates, both of which things are extremely probable, the Minneapolis people may feel sorry that they talked in this manner. The Pioneer Press quotes an interview with the general traffic manager of one of the great systems centering in the Twin Cities, in which he expressed the opinion that the fight is the most disastrous attack upon their own interests that the Minneapolis millers could make.

"It simply means," he said, "that they are fearful lest their chief industry be gobbled up by Duluth. That is to say that the great milling interests on which the Twin City has prided herself all these years must succumb to the enterprise of a go-ahead city like Duluth. It is scarcely possible that they can win their point. The Northern Pacific is the controlling factor in the situation, and the disposition of that system is such that any reduction on rates from the grain region to Minneapolis would be a discrimination against Duluth. That would be remedying an inconvenience on one hand by causing an injustice on the other."

Certainly Duluth has no reason to complain of the inquiry as far as it has progressed. Every witness has shown the great advantages which Duluth possesses as a milling center. Time and equitable freight rates will do the rest.

UNDER WHICH KING?

If it be true that Hon. G. G. Hartley is in favor of Mr. Kendall, as he has stated, why does he not use the influence of the News, if it has any, in Mr. Kendall's behalf? Of course it may be that Mr. Hartley is anxious to maintain cordial relations with the supporters of both Col. Graves and Mr. Kendall, in which case his position can be understood, but it is just possible that like others who have assumed similar positions in the past he may lose the friendship and confidence of both sides. The sincerity of his support of Mr. Kendall would certainly be better demonstrated if the News also came out in his behalf.

The vested proprietor's position is easily understood. He cannot commit the paper to one side or the other without permission. He may be again seeking an office in the future. By preserving a strictly neutral attitude, so far as the News is concerned, he can be in a position to seek the support of which ever side wins. This is the only explanation of the manner in which he resents the inquiry of The Herald as to where the News stands on the question. He says that if The Herald or any other paper wants to know the position of the News, "they can consult the editor personally."

But suppose The Herald did consult the editor personally, what good would that do? The opinions of the editor might not be those of the News—in fact it is dollars to doughnuts that they would not be. A very little thought will show that the best thing the News can do is to say at once whether it prefers Graves or Kendall.

The Minneapolis millers want the privilege of carrying wheat from Dakota to Minneapolis, grinding it into flour there, and then shipping the flour to Duluth, all for the same rate as is charged for shipping wheat direct from Dakota to Duluth. This is what the Minneapolis millers would call fair rates. Their gall is sublime and must impress the interstate commission with its adamant qualities.

The report that the Commercial bank of St. Paul is to be reorganized under the presidency of Hon. Albert Scheffer will be received with pleasure. Mr. Scheffer is a man who deserves better luck than that which has overtaken him and his institution, and if a reorganization can be effected his many friends throughout the state will rejoice.

Chauncey Depew is to make an address at the Swedish Tabernacle in Minneapolis next Saturday night, when an entertainment will be given by the Press club of that city. Seats are to be placed on sale tomorrow and any Duluth people who desire to hear the eloquent New Yorker should secure their tickets at once, as the prospects are that there will be a very large audience.

There is no cessation in the Blaine boom and unless it suffers a serious relapse this week, it will be impossible to prevent the convention at Minneapolis going with a rush to the man from Maine. Blaine and Rusk seems to be the popular ticket with Republicans now, and it must be confessed that it is a pretty strong ticket.

The people of this section of the country have no reason to complain of the cold spring, when contrasted with that experienced in other sections. Massachusetts reports the coldest May in twenty years, the flowers and trees being covered with snow a few days ago.

The Philadelphia Press says that "Mexican cattle are suffering from a new disease, the 'swelled head.'" This may be a new disease for cattle, but there have been similar afflictions for a long time.

Minneapolis is very anxious that congress shall designate that city as the head of Mississippi navigation, but as Providence, in His infinite wisdom, has decreed that it shall not be, what congress may say or do on the subject will cut but a small figure.

Judge Bailey, of Eau Claire, whose action in the Russell murder case was decidedly arbitrary and autocratic, is being criticized very severely by many newspapers. Bailey appears to have made himself ridiculous.

Emile Zola is a candidate for a position among "the Immortals" of France, and may get it. But what a misnomer the appellation of this body is, considering how few of them live in memory.

The rainmakers are not in favor this year. What the country wants now is a rain-preventer.

A Decision Tomorrow. A Washington special says that the celebrated Warren-Hyde case will be decided tomorrow. This is one branch of the section 30 case, which has been pending in the department for about four years. There are several valuable tracts of iron land depending upon this decision. It is probable that the present case will go against Mr. Hyde.

The Mother's Responsibility. In New York city alone over 100,000 children die every summer. This is all wrong; it is all needless. The greater number of these deaths are caused by improper care and food. Fully half of these deaths could have been prevented had infected food been known and used. This pure substitute for mother's milk brings the little one back to strength and health, and keeps the child happy and healthy.

DECORATION DAY ON THE PLACE.

It's lonesome—seet o' lonesome—it's a Sunday day to me,
It 'pears like—more'n any day I nearly ever see!
Yit with the stars and stripes above, a-flutterin' in the air,
On ev'ry soldier's grave I'd love to lay a lily there.

They say, though, Decoration Days is giner-ally observed
Most everywhere, especially by soldier boys that served;
But me and mother—er's never went—no seldom git away—
In pint o' fact we've allus home (a Decoration Day.
They say the old boys marches through the streets in columns grand,
A-follerin' the old war tunes that they're playin on the band;
And citizens all in, in, and little children, too,
All marchin' under shelter of the old red, white and blue.

With roses roses roses—ev'rybody in the town,
And crowds o' girls in white jest fairly loaded down!
Oh, don't the boys know it, from their camp across the hill?
Don't they see their comrades coming and the old flag wavin still!

Oh, can't they hear the bugle and the rattle of the drum?
Ain't they no way under heaven they can neglect us some?

Ain't they no way we can coax 'em, through the roses, jest to say
They know that every day on earth's their Decoration Day?

We've tried that me and mother—where Elias takes his rest
In the orchard—in his uniform, and hands across his breast;
And the flag he died for sailin' and a-rippin' in the breeze
Above his grave—and over that—the robin in the tree!

And yet it's lonesome—lonesome—it's a Sunday day to me,
It 'pears like—more'n any day I nearly ever see!
Yit with the stars and stripes above, a-flutterin' in the air,
On ev'ry soldier's grave I'd love to lay a lily there.

To the Front Once More. The Volunteer has said it, anent the grand encampment for 1892:

Almost every prominent G. A. R. post in the country is making arrangements to attend the national encampment to be held in Washington next September. No city in America has so many attractions for the Union veterans as Washington. It was the central point from which all the orders for putting down the great rebellion issued, and many of the most important battles were fought within a short distance of the capital. Probably one-half of all the soldiers enlisted in the Union army either camped in the vicinity or at some time passed through its wide streets.

On the 22d day of May, 1865, the Army of the Potomac, commanded by General Meade, and the day following the portion of the western army that had marched from Atlanta to the sea, commanded by General Sherman, not less than 150,000 all told, passed in review on the streets of Washington. Twenty-seven years have passed since then, but still there are many survivors who will make an effort, yet, sacrifices, to be present at what is likely to be the greatest gathering of the soldiers since the war.

The Army Mule on Hand. An aged dorky was leading an old and dilapidated mule down Filbert street, draped in innumerable flags and flowers, and was asked by the scribe what was the cause of it.

"Well, Boss, dis yere mule am nigh on ter 53 yars ole. He war one ob de cannon mules in de Army ob de Potomack. Him hind legs hab done as much Justice to de rebel as a musket, and every Memorial Day I allers plants a few flowers all ober him. It kinder ebens up things for de many graves he filled which will hab no flowers put on 'em. Whoel Sam Jones! Whoel dar!" and jerking at the old mule he went his way.—Selected.

Waiting for the Bugle. We wait for the bugle, the night dews are cold, The limbs of the soldiers feel jaded and sore, The field of our bivouac is windy and bare, There is lead in our joints, there is frost in our hair.

The future is veiled and its fortunes unknown As we lie with hushed breath till the bugle is blown.

At the sound of the bugle each comrade shall spring Like an arrow released from the strain of the string;

The courage, the impulse of youth shall come back To banish the chill of the drear bivouac, And sorrows and losses and cares fade away When that life giving signal proclaims the new day.

Though the bivouac of age may put ice in our veins, And no fiber of steel in our sinew remains; Though the comrades of yesterday's march are not here, And the sunlight seems pale and the branches are sever;

Though the sound of our cheering dies down to a moan, We shall find our lost youth when the bugle is blown.

HEROES HONORED.

With Oratory and Floral Offerings
Veterans Remember Their Comrades Who are Gone.

Address by Mayor d'Autremont and an Original Heroic Poem by John H. Boyle.

Bishop McGillicrick Delivers a Patriotic Memorial Sermon to the Army Posts.

Memorial day was never more appropriately observed in Duluth than it has been today. The weather has been delightful, all that could be wished, and all public buildings and offices generally have been closed. Flags are flying at half mast even on the street car trolleys, and everything indicates that this is a national holiday.

The morning program was in charge of Willis A. Gorman post, No. 13. The two posts and the Sons of Veterans met at Grand Army hall in the Hayes block and at 10 o'clock, headed by the Harris military band, marched down Superior street to Fourth avenue west, up to Second street, east to Third avenue and there took the Woodland cars to the cemetery. The customary ritualistic service over the graves was held here and the floral decorations were strewn upon them. These were beautiful and some were artistically elaborate. Some of the prettiest came from the school children. A beautiful offering was placed on the grave of Joshua B. Culver by Culver post, which bears his name. It was in the form of an oval and was a mass of flowers; across the center were the words, Joshua B. Culver, and below them G. A. R. The volley over the graves was fired by the Sons of Veterans, who acted as the escort.

Upon the return from the graves shortly after noon dinner was served in the Hayes block hall by the Ladies' Circle, G. A. R.

The afternoon exercises were under the direction of Joshua B. Culver Post. The line of march was as follows:

FIRST DIVISION.
Platoon of Police.
Company A, Third Regiment, M. N. G.
Company B, Third Regiment, M. N. G.
Willis A. Gorman Post, G. A. R.
J. B. Culver Post, G. A. R.
Lincoln Camp, S. V.
Bethel Military Co.
Second Division.
Polish Band.
Rifle Societies.
Chas. Stewart.
Ancient Order Hibernians.

THIRD DIVISION.
Band.
Scandinavian Good Templars.
Mayor and Common Council in Carriages.
Fire Department.

AFTERNOON EXERCISES.

John H. Boyle Reads a Heroic and Patriotic Original Poem.

The exercises of the afternoon were held in the Temple Opera house, and an enormous crowd was present. Post Adjutant N. A. Gearheart read the department and national orders. John H. Boyle was then introduced and read an original and appropriate poem. It is as follows:

The Tribute of Flowers.

In the midst of the blossoms that circle
The tomb of the hero, we lay
The tribute of flowers on the mound
That marks the spot where he lay.
O'er the breasts of the heroes that lie here Asleep,
Though gone is a series of sad, cycling years
Since those sons were fresh turned and bedewed
With our tears,
Yet we wish that the hand that made liberty Could now be repaid with love's tribute of flowers.
For they valiantly fought cherished freedom to gain,
And succeeded, but found, what they feared not,
a grave.

Ah, these sacrificed lives we can never redeem,
But their story rears like a terrible dream
Three decades ago and aghast stood the world.
When that ominous missile at Sumter was fired;
When treason supplanted the Stars and the Stripes
And placed o'er the ruins the Stars and the Stripes.

Oh, what terrible import that shot does convey
No pen can describe it, no picture portray
The of muffled drums that had rung through the South.
Were emphasized thus by that cannon's dread mouth—
"Southern labor is taxed to aid Northern army."
And the rights of the States to withdraw is imposed.

"We will build us an empire, while cotton, as king,
To our national coffers rich treasures will bring,
And our lines will wider and wider expand, Till the Lakes and the Oceans are bounds of our land."
To secure these rich looms and our slaves to retain.
"The vile Union must quickly be severed in twain.
Or a million of lives, to prevent such a scene,
It will cost them to fill the deep chasm between."
Should a thousand volences in fury break forth
And their red lava torrents sweep over the North,
They could scarcely produce a more feverish heat
Than the first ball that struck at Sumter's ground feet.

Hark! the far reaching echoes now serve to inform
Our brave fathers and sons of the fires coming storm;
Now quickly from country and hamlet they come
In response to the roll of the muffled drum.
Their country is calling—they cannot delay—
A few parting words, then a kiss and away, While tearful eyes follow till the gloom of the night
Or the hills intervening, have hid them from sight.

The pangs and privations they suffer none know
But those who have faced the dread lines of the foe.
Like a mighty blue wave the brave boys move away
To encounter the on-coming tide of the Gray.
As the billows of ocean by Neptune flung Rush with open bosom the rocks among,
Or a tempest here, with recurrent strokes,
Sweep down on a forest of giant oaks,
So our columns swept down the lines below—
We could never contend with a braver foe.
Then the long lines of muskets and the rattling and
That shook the whole country from center to thore,
The fell sabre's clash and the bugle's loud
call,
And the infantry charge with its merciless steel,
The rallying columns melting quickly away
Like the frost on the morn of a bright summer day.
The two armies revealing, as they surge o'er the plain,
The horrible picture of the wounded and slain,
The ambulance cart moving slowly and slow,
Often pausing to staunch up the red vital flow,

The hospital scenes of suffering and death,
Where contagion exhales its most poisonous breath,
And the prisons infernal—all serve but to show
What the cost the brave boys on our land bestrew.

A Union endearing, an air that is free,
With slavery forever driven into the sea.

When those four tragic years their great length had dragged by,
And rebellion, disarmed, was abandoned to
the sword,
The hearts in the brave soldiers' bosoms beat fast,
As they hastened to join the loved friends of the past;
Now, consider approaches the swift flying train—
A few moments more and we greet them again—
But—these are not with them—what makes the delay?

Life's flickering lamp had gone out on the way.
There were some, who, it needed no words to tell,
Had burned but to whisper a last farewell;
And some who were buried in hostile lands
Have been hither borne by affection's hands,
To rest with the others in sweet repose,
"Neath the wreaths of blossoms that love bestrews."

On many a field 'neath the Southern sky,
Where in ranks they fought, still in ranks they
lie,
While above them the emblem for which they fell,
And the laureled slabs, mark the places well.
There are others that slumber in graves unknown.
Under mounds unmarked by a friendly stone;
Where their lives were given for a better will.
While over a letter the tears yet fall;
Perhaps some brave soldiers are still
For a day, to recross the time-worn sill,
And the shadow of a fall on the lonely floor,
But the absent foot never passes o'er.

Brave veterans, your ranks are fast growing
thin:
There are no recruits—you are closing in—
Two soon to be garnered like golden grain;
But your life's rich fruitage will still remain.
South and North are gone let the nation say,
In as tender words as it says today,
Their once flaming swords are now eaten with rust.
Their war flags are furled and are covered with dust.

Their camp fires all have gone out on the hill,
And the bonfires of war lie calmly still,
Let them rest, for their feet are weary and sore;
Let them sleep while with flowers we cover
them o'er.
Let them sleep in those spots where no blossoms
are known.
For the angels will ever keep watch o'er their rest.
Let them slumber in peace till the long night is past.
The old world reveille shall awake them at last,
From the depths of the sea and the graves
of the dead,
To be happily mustered on the great roll of Heaven.

THE MEMORIAL ORATION.
Mayor d'Autremont Delivers a Fine
Address to the Veterans.

Mayor d'Autremont, the speaker of the day, was next introduced and delivered an excellent address. He was listened to with marked attention and was frequently applauded. He said:
Mr. Chairman and Soldiers of the Union: We have assembled today to remember the brave men who have sacrificed their lives for the Union. We have gathered here to honor the memory
of those heroes who at their country's call, abandoning all that man holds dear, marched forth to suffer and die that their country might be saved, and their citizen and those to come thereafter
might enjoy the liberties handed down to us from our ancestors. While, in the course of time, our country has grown powerful and great, with many new stars
added to our flag, it is to you the credit is due that none of the old stars were erased therefrom. Over thirty years have passed since the call to arms to save our honor, our flag and our country
was flashed over the land, to every city, town and hamlet, and how nobly it was responded to is known to all the world.
At the beginning, the South was apparently far better prepared than the North for that terrible struggle. For long years disunion and treason had been plotted and openly talked, and secret places but in the very halls of congress and among high officials, and all that time, while the North was pushing commercial enterprises and improvements, building manufactures and receiving a great stream of emigration,
the South was thinking, talking and preparing for the inevitable struggle that sooner or later was to burst forth with such fury.

But they overlooked one great fact—that the best preparation for war is peace, and the establishing of industries and manufactures. Long and hard as the awful struggle was, did you ever pause to think how much longer and harder it would have been had their rich mines of coal and iron been developed and manufactures established throughout their entire land, ready at any time to be turned to the making of rifles, cannon and munition of war of all kinds? By cringing yielding everything demanded, the North might have put off the conflict for a time, only
to have it burst forth later, fiercer
bloodier and more terrible.

You may talk and write from youth to age, and you may talk and write from youth to age, and you may talk and write
from youth to age, but the one great cause underlying it all was human slavery. Free labor and free trade cannot long exist side by side in this enlightened age and in a free country, and thank God it is so.
For all time in the United States, and with it the pernicious doctrine that a state has the right to withdraw from the Union. Unknowingly to themselves,
the seceding states aimed at the end of
the choice institutions of those firing them,
and no longer can American citizens at home or abroad when speaking of their liberties, be proud of the South, without being told that in spite of all that human beings are bought and sold in their country, and never again can it be said of that dear flag of ours, with its broad stripes and ever-increasing stars,
the very sight of which makes the heart
thrill with patriotism and pride, that it is "a shield a slaver's deck and binds a captive's chain." For it now waves over
a nation of sixty millions of people, free, happy and enlightened, all equal before
the law.

During the presidential contest of 1860, when it became apparent to all thinking men that in the four-cornered fight, Abraham Lincoln would, in all human probability, be successful, secession, which had been long talked of and threatened, took a more definite form,
and it was openly stated and privately
agreed upon among many of the Southern leaders, that in that event, South
Carolina and as many slaveholding states as she could draw with her, would secede from the Union, peacefully if they could, or in blood and carnage if they must. And immediately after the result was known that Lincoln was not only elected but had carried every free state,
excepting New Jersey, and in that state
four out of seven of the electors, the South Carolina legislature, then in session on November 12th, called a convention for the understood purpose of secession, delegates to be elected
December 6th and the convention to assemble December 17th, and on the 20th the ordinance of secession was reported and passed by a unanimous vote. Other Southern states

rapidly followed in her wake—no time
was lost—so that by Feb. 4, 1861, the delegates from seven states, to be followed soon by three others, met at Montgomery to form the Confederate States
of America, and elected their officers.
Arsenals, forts and property of all kinds belonging to the United States had been seized and still no war or movement on the part of our government to protect itself or its property. Although long talked, when it came so sudden, so well organized and so powerful that men stood aghast and idle treason was rampant, not only through the South, but among the high government officials at Washington. A short time previous,
15,000 stands of arms had been removed from Northern arsenals to Southern ones
to be seized upon by their munitions
of war by the Confederacy.

Lincoln was inaugurated, and still the country seemed appalled. Would the North yield everything and try to keep the South in the Union? Would she let her go in peace? Would there be war?
The country seemed appalled. Would the North yield everything and try to keep the South in the Union? Would she let her go in peace? Would there be war?

On many a field 'neath the Southern sky,

fell,

Mr. Chairman and Soldiers of the Union: We have assembled today to remember the brave men who have sacrificed their lives for the Union. We have gathered here to honor the memory
of those heroes who at their country's
call, abandoning all that man holds dear,
marched forth to suffer and die that their
country might be saved, and their citizen and those to come thereafter
might enjoy the liberties handed down
to us from our ancestors. While, in the course of time, our country has grown
powerful and great, with many new stars
added to our flag, it is to you the credit
is due that none of the old stars were erased therefrom. Over thirty years have passed since the call to arms to
save our honor, our flag and our country
was flashed over the land, to every city,
town and hamlet, and how nobly it was
responded to is known to all the world.
At the beginning, the South was apparently far better prepared than the North for that terrible struggle. For long years disunion and treason had been plotted and openly talked, and
secret places but in the very halls of
congress and among high officials, and
all that time, while the North was pushing commercial enterprises and improvements, building manufactures and receiving a great stream of emigration,
the South was thinking, talking and preparing for the inevitable struggle that sooner or later was to burst forth with
such fury.

But they overlooked one great fact—that the best preparation for war is
peace, and the establishing of industries
and manufactures. Long and hard as
the awful struggle was, did you ever
pause to think how much longer and
harder it would have been had their rich mines of coal and iron been developed and manufactures established
throughout their entire land, ready at any time to be turned to the making of
rifles, cannon and munition of war of all kinds? By cringing yielding everything demanded, the North might have put off the conflict for a time, only
to have it burst forth later, fiercer
bloodier and more terrible.

You may talk and write from youth to
age, and you may talk and write from
youth to age, and you may talk and write
from youth to age, but the one great cause
underlying it all was human slavery. Free
labor and free trade cannot long exist side
by side in this enlightened age and in a free country, and thank God it is so.
For all time in the United States, and
with it the pernicious doctrine that a state has the right to withdraw from the Union. Unknowingly to themselves,
the seceding states aimed at the end of
the choice institutions of those firing them,
and no longer can American citizens at
home or abroad when speaking of their liberties, be proud of the South, without being told that in spite of all that human beings are bought and sold in
their country, and never again can it be said of that dear flag of ours, with its
broad stripes and ever-increasing stars,
the very sight of which makes the heart
thrill with patriotism and pride, that it
is "a shield a slaver's deck and binds a captive's chain." For it now waves over
a nation of sixty millions of people, free,
happy and enlightened, all equal before
the law.

During the presidential contest of 1860, when it became apparent to all
thinking men that in the four-cornered
fight, Abraham Lincoln would, in all
human probability, be successful, secession, which had been long talked of and
threatened, took a more definite form,
and it was openly stated and privately
agreed upon among many of the Southern leaders, that in that event, South
Carolina and as many slaveholding
states as she could draw with her, would secede from the Union, peacefully if they could, or in blood and carnage if they must. And immediately after the result was known that Lincoln was not only
elected but had carried every free state,
excepting New Jersey, and in that state
four out of seven of the electors, the
South Carolina legislature, then in session on November 12th, called a convention for the understood purpose of secession, delegates to be elected
December 6th and the convention to assemble December 17th, and on the 20th the ordinance of secession was reported and passed by a unanimous vote. Other Southern states

rapidly followed in her wake—no time
was lost—so that by Feb. 4, 1861, the
delegates from seven states, to be followed soon by three others, met at Montgomery to form the Confederate States
of America, and elected their officers.
Arsenals, forts and property of all kinds
belonging to the United States had been seized and still no war or movement on
the part of our government to protect itself or its property. Although long
talked, when it came so sudden, so well
organized and so powerful that men
stood aghast and idle treason was rampant, not only through the South, but
among the high government officials at Washington. A short time previous,
15,000 stands of arms had been removed from Northern arsenals to Southern ones
to be seized upon by their munitions
of war by the Confederacy.

Lincoln was inaugurated, and still the country seemed appalled. Would the North yield everything and try to keep the South in the Union? Would she let her go in peace? Would there be war?
The country seemed appalled. Would the North yield everything and try to keep the South in the Union? Would she let

On many a field 'neath the Southern sky,
Where in ranks they fought, still in ranks they
lie,
While above them the emblem for which they
fell,
And the laureled slabs, mark the places well.
There are others that slumber in graves unknown.
Under mounds unmarked by a friendly stone;
Where their lives were given for a better will.
While over a letter the tears yet fall;
Perhaps some brave soldiers are still
For a day, to recross the time-worn sill,
And the shadow of a fall on the lonely floor,
But the absent foot never passes o'er.

Brave veterans, your ranks are fast growing
thin:
There are no recruits—you are closing in—
Two soon to be garnered like golden grain;
But your life's rich fruitage will still remain.
South and North are gone let the nation say,
In as tender words as it says today,
Their once flaming swords are now eaten with rust.
Their war flags are furled and are covered with dust.

Their camp fires all have gone out on the hill,
And the bonfires of war lie calmly still,
Let them rest, for their feet are weary and sore;
Let them sleep while with flowers we cover
them o'er.
Let them sleep in those spots where no blossoms
are known.
For the angels will ever keep watch o'er their
rest.
Let them slumber in peace till the long night is
past.
The old world reveille shall awake them at last,
From the depths of the sea and the graves
of the dead,
To be happily mustered on the great roll of Heaven.

CITY BRIEFS.

Smoke Endion cigar. W. A. Foote & Co. Schiller's "Peace and Plenty" cigar has no rival. Ricinate properly applied makes wood as non-inflammable as iron. Father Chiquy lectures at West Superior Monday and Tuesday. G. A. Seipel, job and book printing, 15 Second avenue west, Duluth, Minn. Dr. Schiffman, Woodbridge block, fills the most sensitive teeth without pain. "On or Before" mortgage loans at very lowest rates. Nodelay, Clague & Prindle, 216 West Superior street. One birth, a male, and one death, John Sandberg, aged 30 years, cause not given, were reported at the health office this morning.

The ladies of Endion church will give a strawberry festival at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Upham, 1427 East First street, on Friday evening. Burglars paid a visit to the little store of S. Yanka, at 1023 west Michigan street last night and got away with twelve boxes of cigars, four boxes of candy and other articles. There was no session of the municipal court this morning. The various city offices were open for a short time early in the day and then closed to allow principals and employees an opportunity to participate in the observance of the day.

PERSONAL.

Norman Perkins, of St. Paul, was in city yesterday. J. J. Costello has been very low today and may not survive the night. Miss Lena Winslow, of Minneapolis, spent Sunday with friends in this city.

Building Inspector Robinson has returned from Chicago where he purchased a number of instruments for inspecting the gas and water furnished.

THEIR FIRST ELECTION.

The Towns of Nichols and Biwabik Elect Their First Officers. County Auditor La Vague received returns last Saturday afternoon of the election in the towns of Nichols and Biwabik. At the former place 102 votes were cast and the following ticket was elected: Chairman, A. P. Wood; supervisors, William Buckley and G. G. Beede; clerk, Fred Colby; treasurer, W. Stephens; assessor, J. R. Shear; justices, George R. Sutherland and Charles H. Erickson; constables, W. F. Byr and Alex Murray. Charles H. Erickson received 54 votes for justice and Joseph Griffith 45, this being the only contest. At Biwabik 27 votes were cast and the following officers elected: Chairman, J. G. Coho; supervisors, A. P. Dodge and H. Duggan; clerk, W. A. House; treasurer, D. W. Freeman; assessor, A. J. Carlson; justices, Robert Faucett and Carroll Carson; constables, Archie McComb and L. Lewis.

ARE NOT PLEASED.

East End Property Owners Don't Like the Duluth & Northeastern Company's Franchise. Afraid the Business Center Will be Pulled Further West on Superior Street.

A Meeting has been Called For Tomorrow Forenoon to Discuss the Situation.

The residents of the East End of the city, or rather the district east of Lake avenue are aroused over the granting of the franchise to the Duluth & Northeastern Railway and Terminal company and are endeavoring to get up a sensation. A meeting has been called for tomorrow morning "to consider the franchise claimed to be granted" to the road and to "devise such means as may seem best to prevent the injury threatened to the commercial interests of the city if the project is carried out."

The cause of the dissatisfaction is that the tunnel scheme is abandoned and a bridge is to be built on Fifth avenue west instead. The property owners east of Lake avenue view this with alarm. It has always been their idea that Minnesota Point must be connected with the mainland on Lake avenue. To connect on Fifth avenue west, they are afraid will have the effect of pulling the business center even farther west on Superior street than it now is. They want the street car line to run down Lake avenue. As long as all the schemes to get to Minnesota Point provided for crossing the canal they were satisfied but now they are aroused. Some of them in their excitement even go so far as to hint at jobbery and corruption.

Just what can be done now that the franchise is already granted is probably known only to the men who are getting up the opposition but an attempt may be made to prevent the government from granting permission to build the bridge. At any rate the meeting will probably indicate what course will be taken.

MAY BE FOUL PLAY.

The Watchman on One of the Docks is Missing.

C. F. Franke, the night watchman at the Northwestern Fuel company's dock No. 3 in West Superior, is missing under suspicious circumstances which give rise to the impression that he may have been foully dealt with. His dinner pail, lantern and rubber coat, were found on the edge of the dock at an early hour yesterday morning, and he has not been seen since. Sometime during the night he was seen by people who had occasion to visit the dock, but his disappearance is laid at the door of an alleged tramp who had trouble with the day watchman just before Franke came on duty.

A MINNESOTA ARTIST.

Gilbert Munger's High Rank Among the Artists of Europe.

Gilbert Munger, who is probably the most successful and talented member of the American colony in Paris, and who, unquestionably, is one of the foremost landscape artists now living, is a Minnesotan by birth, as the earlier years of his life were spent in and about St. Paul, and it was there that his artistic career received its first important impulse, says the St. Paul Dispatch. His brothers, F. C. Munger, the St. Paul music dealer, and R. S. Munger, the Duluth capitalist, have been Minnesotans for an average life time. By occupation an engraver, Gilbert Munger rapidly developed a taste for painting, and some of his first efforts in this direction represented Minnesota scenery. His career is all the more remarkable from the fact that he is wholly self taught. It is said that he never in his life received a lesson in either drawing or painting. Few of his canvases have ever been seen in St. Paul. Two years ago three examples of his work were shown at the state fair at St. Paul, and they attracted profound attention from a few connoisseurs who by chance paid a visit to that usually artistic and uninteresting branch of the annual exhibit. These pictures were in the possession of R. C. Munger, who had charge of the art display that year, and in whose Third street music store, about a year later, they were nearly ruined by fire.

Gilbert Munger's rank among the artists of Europe is well known. Though standing at the very head of American painters abroad, he is not a well-advertised artist. He has not exhibited in the Paris salons for several years past, for the reason that the very product of his palette has been sold in advance to galleries and dealers in England, Germany and Belgium. True it is that he has been frequently on the life at the Royal academy in London, at Berlin and at Munich, but as yet the salon has seen no work of his and will not see one this year. He will be well represented in the art exhibition of the World's fair next year, and with his American friends will have to content.

The Chicago Evening Post of recent date devotes a column to Paris correspondence to Mr. Munger, in which it is stated that the reigning duke of Saxe-Coburg is one of his greatest admirers. One of his pictures is to be seen in the duke's library at Coburg, and, as a visible sign of his esteem, he has conferred upon Mr. Munger the knighthood of his house order. Another much-coveted distinction which this American painter is proudly wearing is the German cross for art and science.

The New York Journal prints a letter from Mr. Munger in answer to the inquiry, "Why do American painters live abroad?" in which the artist says: "One of the reasons for my own stay, now prolonged since 1877, and the reason with which I am fond of appealing my patriotism whenever it urges my return to the blue skies of my native country, is the increase of knowledge and the means of growth in art everywhere at hand in these old lands."

Furthermore, it is in Europe rather than in America that the indefinable and singular charm in painting which men call style is most readily attained. Perhaps the ample survey of the whole field of art offered in Europe, better enabled a Frenchman to strike his personal style—as the French say—to find out his failings and avoid them, I should say. The gratifying measure of success which has greeted my humble efforts in these latter years is due, I am sure, to having found the way to my own style through a number of experiments and a series of careful observations which I should not have been able to make if settled at home.

"There is a crystallization of style in painting as in literature. It is, of course, a slow process; and in my own case is the fruit of long seasons of painting in the foothills of our own Rocky mountains, in the shadow of El Capitan in the Yosemite, and of St. Paul's cathedral in London; of work in the open of Scot-

THEATRICAL WORK A SPECIALTY.

Gentlemen:—Some three years ago your fireproofing was presented to us for examination, and after a thorough test we were asked what we thought of it. We would not at that time give an opinion of its merits; but can now say after three years of actual test, that we believe your RICINATE to be permanent and reliable, and that it is all you represent as a fire-proof material.

We recommend its thorough application to all wood, canvas and other inflammable materials in all buildings where stage work and scenery is to be used. Its application in all instances to wood, canvas, upholstery, and other inflammable materials, made under our observation, has given perfect satisfaction, and we have no hesitancy in recommending it as a safeguard against fire. Very respectfully yours,

Signed, J. B. McLEATHRICK & SONS.

Journal of the Platform

Vol. 18.

PUBLISHED BY MAJOR J. B. POND,

No. 14.

216 FOURTH AVE., NEW YORK CITY, UNDER THE EVERETT HOUSE.

THE LYCEUM PLATFORM stands for Ability, Genius, Education, Reform, Entertainment. On it the greatest readers, orators and thinkers have stood. On it Reform has found her noblest advocates, Literature her finest expressions, Progress her bravest pleaders, and Humor its happiest translations. The most gifted, the best educated, and the warmest-hearted men and women of the English-speaking race have, in the last forty years, given their best efforts to the Lyceum, and by their noble utterances not only made its platform historic, but symbolic of talent, education, genius and reform.

WILL CARLETON.

(FROM THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, PHILADELPHIA.)

MR. CARLETON'S Lectures and Recitals of his own pathetic and humorous poems have touched the tenderest chords in the hearts of the people, and they have vibrated in sympathy with the joys and sorrows of his creations. His name is one of the best-beloved household words in our cultured American homes. A popular poet is not always a popular reader of his own poems, but Mr. Carleton has been as effective with his voice as with his pen.

We present to our readers the portrait of one who, for fifteen years, has been a leading figure upon the lecture-platform of this country. Still in his prime—more magnetic and vigorous than ever—he brings to the hearers the experience obtained from hundreds of the largest and most critical audiences that America and Europe can furnish. He was one of the pioneers in that unrivalled class of entertainments called "Authors' Readings," and is to-day one of the very few who can interest and delight an audience with the rendering of their own literary productions.

His poems have always been notable for the fact that they were peculiarly well adapted to public recitation, and, in truth, no one author is probably so much quoted in the most attractive elocutionary entertainments of the day. Schools and other associations often join together and have a "Carleton Evening"—giving every recitation from his books, and even the music of the occasion is often drawn from poems of his that have been made into songs.

In Mr. Carleton's own entertainment you have his most notable poems, old and new, read, or rather recited, by HIMSELF—interpreted by one who not only understands them, but made them. Elocutionists have spent weeks of study upon his poems, before venturing to render them in public. Here you have them brought before you by one who studied and felt them before they were written.

It is well known that while Will Carleton's recitations are mostly in poetry, they are HIS KIND of poetry, and not of the stilted, incomprehensible character produced by the would-be imitators of the "Old Masters." While his rhymes and measures are as nearly perfect as is necessary to comply with the established rules of prosody, they are purposely debarred of that labored, painful smoothness which enables the hearer to glide easily into a mental recumbent position, and go to sleep. Hearing Will Carleton is not a good cure for insomnia.

"I do not read any poetry but Will Carleton's," is the remark of a great many clear-brained and deep-hearted people, and these same persons, as well as many others, always say, after hearing the author read his own productions, "I thought I knew all that was in them, but he gave them ten times the meaning they had before."

The ludicrous and pathetic are so deftly mingled in the poems he selects for public reading, that, to quote a competent critic, "laughter and tears struggle for supremacy"; and not one of all his productions but has a moral and elevating tendency, and makes all who hear it wiser and better for having done so.

It must not be forgotten that Mr. Carleton is also an orator of the first rank, and often intersperses with his poems glowing passages in prose, full of eloquence and wit—in fact, to quote a distinguished statesman, "There isn't a lull in the interest, a pause in the variety, or a single dull minute during the whole blessed time he is on the platform." If you do not believe it, go and hear him—perhaps the last chance you will ever have.

WILL CARLETON IN WASHINGTON.

Most lecturers of note appear more or less times in the capital of our country. Will Carleton has done so again and again, winning fresh laurels each time.

His first visit was in 1875, when he lectured twice in Lincoln Hall. Although not a veteran now by any means, but just in the prime of life, he was almost a mere boy then. Press and public gave him a most enthusiastic reception, as the following newspaper extracts will show:

The Washington Chronicle says:

The famous author of "Farm Ballads" delivered the third lecture of the Star Course at Lincoln Hall last evening. Most authors who have gained distinction have utterly failed as lecturers, but Carleton is evidently an exception to the rule—and he may look for his highest honors upon the platform. We have never seen a more hearty endorsement given to a lecturer by an audience than was expressed last evening. We hope Mr. Carleton can be induced to repeat it, when he will be given an audience even larger than that of last evening."

The Critic comments as follows:

"His lecture is not a dull piece of poetry, delivered in a monotonous tone, but bright and sparkling, full of hits on the times, and read as none but the brilliant author could. The way he 'threw off' the fashionable, political and religious shams of the nineteenth century was remarkable."

The National Republican:

"The patrons of the Star Course were most elegantly entertained last night at Lincoln Hall by Will Carleton—a writer in poetry and prose dear to the pride of every American heart. His audience was not only charmed by an effective and graceful delivery, by the wit, sparkle and beauty of the lines delivered, but by the sound instruction contained within each period. Mr. Carleton added largely to his fame as a poet, scholar and lecturer last night, and gave dignity to the Star Course."

The following is from the Washington correspondent of The Standard:

"Will Carleton has been here. Wednesday evening of last week he delivered his new lecture, and was met by a very enthusiastic audience. Indeed, the audience was so well pleased that it prevailed upon him, through a petition, signed by Speaker Blaine and a large number of members, to deliver the same again on the Saturday evening following. On this evening the audience was still larger, and, if possible, more enthusiastic than on the previous occasion. Perhaps the silent comment of such a reception is the best praise of the lecturer and lecturer that could be given, and any remark I could make might seem less to increase than diminish this praise. But I must be excused for saying that, of the large number of celebrated lectures which it has been my privilege to hear, I can remember none which has struck me as being more witty, more pleasant, more true or more certain of becoming popular."

The following is the petition referred to:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 28.

DEAR SIR: As the stormy and unpleasant night prevented a large number from being present at your lecture last evening, who have learned of its merits, and desire very much to hear it, we believe that we express a general wish of the public in requesting that you repeat the lecture while you remain in the city. Respectfully,

" WILLIAM WILLIAMS, Ind. And many others.

Besides these occasions, he has been engaged again and again to lecture and read in the different courses of the Capitol City, each time receiving the newspaper and personal praise of an established favorite.

The Grand Army of the Republic have sent him invitation after invitation to be their poet at the decoration of soldiers' graves at Arlington Heights, and twice he has been able to accept, charging nothing for the service, except the consciousness of having praised, in glowing verse, the dead braves of our nation.

The following newspaper accounts graphically

describe his first appearance at the great national cemetery:

Emma Jones in The Toledo Blade:

"At precisely 1 o'clock a salute of twenty-one guns sounded from their brazen throats, 'Honor to the sixteen thousand,' a signal for all to assemble at the amphitheater, built near the Manor House expressly for these occasions, and there we listened to appropriate music from the children of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home, to an oration, and, best of all, to a poem from Will Carleton, rich in immortal lines. Poems for special occasions rarely add to the fame of their authors, but this poem had 'a tone of the immortal melodies' in it, and our children's children will read it when you and I are dust. The President joined heartily in the applause evoked during its reading; and at its close the Secretary of War, who sat behind me, praised it with the enthusiasm of a boy."

Rev. George Taylor, Chaplain Grand Army of the Republic, in The Detroit Tribune:

"The ceremonies at Arlington were honored by the presence of the President, Members of his Cabinet, and other distinguished personages. A large choir of first-class singers were trained for the occasion, and the children of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home sang plaintive psalms over the graves of their own fathers. The National Marine Band of fifty-two pieces, discoursed in thrilling strains of music of the highest order. During one whole hour, while the graves of 15,000 of our heroes were being strewn with flowers and evergreens, the artillery of the district, in minute-guns, thundered forth from the Heights of Arlington the announcement to the whole District of Columbia that the solemn, but grateful and patriotic rite was being performed. A national salute next proclaimed the commencing of vocal exercises at the amphitheater. A vast audience gathered, and was feasted on the luxuries of music, song, prayer, oratory and poetry. The crowning interest of the day, however, was in the poetic effusions of Will Carleton, who, under the title of 'Converse with the Slain,' really excelled himself, while he evoked, as from their silent bivouacs, the father and the boy, the mother and the nurse, the white and the colored, who were sleeping the sleep of heroes and heroines around us, and gave us their sad, yet patriotic and thrilling responses, while the almost-deafening applause of the audience rang out at the close of each paragraph. One of the distinguished people upon the platform exclaimed, impulsively, 'I have no recollection when I felt so proud of my country as I do at this hour.' At the close of the ceremonies, the President, rising from his seat with a brotherly smile upon his countenance, introduced himself, congratulating him at the glorious success of his effort, and most cordially solicited a personal call at the Executive Mansion."

Will Carleton has been criticized because upon this occasion he devoted a stanza to the Southern soldiers, some of whom were sleeping in the cemetery. But he said in reply that he considered that the war was over; that many of the combatants, while war enemies, were personal friends; and were, may be, even now, happy together in the great land of the hereafter. It was this thought that made him represent the fallen Southern warriors as saying:

"From our dead foemen comes no chiding
forth,
We lie at peace; Heaven has no south or north;
With roots of tree, and flower, and fern and heather,
God reaches down and clasps our hands together."

The above stanza is from "Converse with the Slain," which Mr. Carleton read on that occasion, and afterwards published in "Farm Festivals." "The Loves of the Nations," read upon a succeeding occasion at the same place, met with equal success, and is now published in the revised edition of "Farm Legends."

But still with honest purpose, toil we on;
And if our steps be upright, straight and true,
Far in the East a golden light shall dawn,
And the bright smile of God come bursting through. —"Farm Legends."

WILL CARLETON AND WILSON BARRETT.

English artists have not been accustomed, in former years, to come to America for their material. But things have changed, and now the freshness of the humor that lurks in the "United States language," when ably manipulated, is recognized throughout the British Islands. The following, from The Boston Globe, details a chance meeting between Carleton and Barrett, and illustrates the strong and healthy literary and dramatic ties that are forming between the two great countries:

HOW A DISTINGUISHED ACTOR AND A POET CEMENTED A FRIENDSHIP.

There was a pleasant episode at the Hotel Vendome on Wednesday evening last. After the play of "Hamlet" a little party assembled in Mr. Wilson Barrett's apartments to partake of one of those late suppers that humanity is always being warned against and which men go on eating and thriving on through protracted lives. Of the company was Will Carleton, whose writings carry with them the breath of the prairies, the color of wild flowers, the rhythm of the farm and the pathetic philosophy of the rural home. Barrett was there, his kindly, wholesome face touched with the lines of weariness begotten of two exacting dramatic performances, and beside him the effervescent, genial Dixey, shedding his humor like the pine tree its healing balm, and bearing his honors like a modest, confiding schoolboy.

Then the sturdy Roscius, from far-off Yorkshire, whose name is synonymous with dramatic art in London, and whose fame is now rising at the feet of the New World like a caressing tide, told a little story. It was of when he came, some three years ago, to give a recitation in the great Albert Hall of London, the mighty Colosseum of British Art. It was at the instance of Sir Julius Benedict. Chance had thrown in his way a poem, entitled, "Gone with a Handsomer Man." He did not know the name of the author, but his quick instinct saw the silver thread of humanity running through it. He committed it to memory, and on the appointed day roared it at the legions in the Albert Hall. He promised it with the remark that he did not know the authorship of the poem. The recitation was a hit, and next day a score of letters came saying "the writer of that poem is Will Carleton, the American." From that day Mr. Barrett made "Gone with a Handsomer Man" the feature of his recitation repertoire. In fact, it consisted of this one hit. He gave it at dinners where the votaries of art gathered, and at rich men's feasts. Upon the soft wings of his rich voice it was carried through the London clubs, into receptive homes, and even among the lowly, where toil is eased by the touch of the sympathy that knits the brotherhood of men. So it came about that on this night in the Vendome Hotel the author and the actor came face to face.

"I want to hear you recite my poem, Mr. Barrett," said Mr. Carleton. With becoming modesty Mr. Barrett finally consented. He gave to the recitation the full measure of his artistic feeling. His soul poured into the passionate lines; his voice, so responsive to human agony, played upon every chord until nerves trembled, then sank, like the cadence of the Æolian, into the realm of pathos, where eyes were bedewed with tears. Then came the sunburst of happiness, and the actor, with radiant face, dropped into the chair.

After this, the poet, whose eyes are as soft and as boyish as when they first looked upon the yellow dandelions in the far Western meadows, stood up and repeated one of his poems of the frontier, the story of a pioneer, so woven in with rude heart interest and the tender philosophy of love that it deserves to stand beside the "Cotter's Saturday Night." Perhaps he never gave such glow of tongue, such light and shade of warmth and sentiment to a recitation before. Perhaps he gathered inspiration from the modest actor there and never felt the poet's crown sitting so serenely upon his brow. And who shall say that this chance meeting between author and actor may not cause to be carried across the ocean another of the threads with which literature and art are silently binding two nations of intellects?

AMONG THE KENTUCKIANS.

The following is from The Louisville (Ky.) Commercial: Mr. Will Carleton delivered at Masonic Temple

From "Farm Legends."

last night one of his peculiar and effective recitative lectures. He was introduced by the Rev. Dr. Broadus. The entertainment consisted of selections from his poems, woven together in a continuous story that touched on all the hopes, affections, ambitions and experiences of humanity. "The Tale of the Old Settler" was a dramatic poem of great power and beauty. Carleton writes with exceeding reverence, but he has a delightful humor, that was well received by his hearers. The audience warmed to the poet instantly, and gave him the closest attention and heartiest applause. He has a full voice, droll at times, although pathetic when needs be. The swift arrows he shot at all sorts of follies were tipped with genuine wisdom and feathered with kindly jests. Carleton talks like he writes—from the heart out, and he is peculiarly the poet of the people.

IN THE MINING CAMPS.

The following letter, received in New York a while ago, by the publishers of "Farm Ballads," etc., "explains itself," as the newspapers say: HARPER & BROTHERS, New York:

Please send by registered mail to —, Bonanza City, Idaho, six copies of Will Carleton's works—

two "Ballads," two "Legends" and two "Festivals." Enclosed please find price of same. More orders will follow. I tell you, Mr. Carleton does get on the blind side of us old mountain miners, and I must say, blessings on the head of our home poet. The "First Settler's Story" never fails to break up the fountains of the great deep; and the next question is, "What do those books cost?" Why, brother Harper, I have been in deep repentance ever since I read that story last summer. I have been away from home now two years, and the sad fact remains with me, that I too often used to look about for "blame-timber," and scold the "sweet wife-girl" that kept house for me. Well, I am now her humble lover, and when I go home, I'll ask forgiveness of her; and a great many other husbands could safely go and do likewise. Yours truly, * *

WILL CARLETON AMONG THE CANADIANS.

AN AUDIENCE TAKEN BY STORM—A STRANGE MEDLEY OF LAUGHTER AND TEARS.

It was a strange scene in the City Hall last night.

Mayor Whiting introduced Mr. Carleton in well-chosen words to his first Kingston audience. The poet announced that his subject was a poem lecture—"The Science of Home." His theme was the universal vital one of how to make home happy. By touching references to the sanctity of home he brought the audience fully into sympathy with the subject and secured a control over them that was masterful and complete—and it was maintained to the close. From breathless, strained silence to uproarious laughter, and back again the alternations went as the poet willed. Some old citizens could be seen with handkerchief in hand, alternately wiping away the tears and stuffing it into their mouths to stifle laughter. Little children, too, enjoyed it to the full. Indeed, it was a splendid tribute to the poet's power. Out of the picturesque panorama that passed before the audience for about two hours, perhaps the most affecting was the man who came into the world "with an argument in each hand," who "argued himself out of churches and argued himself into court," whose sweet wife fell "a victim to arguments pro and con," he himself ending "a drifted, logical wreck," passing to the haven of souls, there to "argue concerning his seat." Or perhaps it was "Poor Picnic Sam." The audience cried and laughed in sympathy with the poor ragamuffin's story. Carleton told the story with intervals of eloquent silence that were peculiarly thrilling. The audience passed through them breathless. One saw many weeping over the "poor, dead, drenched hero" who became then the "society success." The rendering of "Over the Hill to the Poorhouse" was heart-rending. An electric tremor of gladness passed through the audience when it came to the "private resurrection" and its joyful conclusion. Then came the "Velocipede Fellow," that "wheel-scamp"—irresistibly humorous. Then the rink scene, the sea-bathing—"If I'd a-spoke it'd a-dried up all the air." The comical oburgation of the old man was irresistible. When the poet had concluded, the audience gave him a spontaneous and repeated ovation.

Then the sturdy Roscius, from far-off Yorkshire, whose name is synonymous with dramatic art in London, and whose fame is now rising at the feet of the New World like a caressing tide, told a little story. It was of when he came, some three years ago, to give a recitation in the great Albert Hall of London, the mighty Colosseum of British Art. It was at the instance of Sir Julius Benedict. Chance had thrown in his way a poem, entitled, "Gone with a Handsome Man." He did not know the name of the author, but his quick instinct saw the silver thread of humanity running through it. He committed it to memory, and on the appointed day roared it at the legions in the Albert Hall. He premised it with the remark that he did not know the authorship of the poem. The recitation was a hit, and next day a score of letters came saying "the writer of that poem is Will Carleton, the American." From that day Mr. Barrett made "Gone with a Handsome Man" the feature of his recitation repertoire. In fact, it consisted of this one hit. He gave it at dinners where the votaries of art gathered, and at rich men's feasts. Upon the soft wings of his rich voice it was carried through the London clubs, into receptive homes, and even among the lowly, where toil is eased by the touch of the sympathy that knits the brotherhood of men. So it came about that on this night in the Vendome Hotel the author and the actor came face to face.

"I want to hear you recite my poem, Mr. Barrett," said Mr. Carleton. With becoming modesty Mr. Barrett finally consented. He gave to the recitation the full measure of his artistic feeling. His soul poured into the passionate lines; his voice, so responsive to human agony, played upon every chord until nerves trembled, then sank, like the cadence of the Aeolian, into the realm of pathos, where eyes were bedewed with tears. Then came the sunburst of happiness, and the actor, with radiant face, dropped into the chair.

After this, the poet, whose eyes are as soft and as boyish as when they first looked upon the yellow dandelions in the far Western meadows, stood up and repeated one of his poems of the frontier, the story of a pioneer, so woven in with rude heart interest and the tender philosophy of love that it deserves to stand beside the "Cotter's Saturday Night." Perhaps he never gave such glow of tongue, such light and shade of warmth and sentiment to a recitation before. Perhaps he gathered inspiration from the modest actor there and never felt the poet's crown sitting so serenely upon his brow. And who shall say that this chance meeting between author and actor may not cause to be carried across the ocean another of the threads with which literature and art are silently binding two nations of intellects?

last night one of his peculiar and effective recitative lectures. He was introduced by the Rev. Dr. Broadus. The entertainment consisted of selections from his poems, woven together in a continuous story that touched on all the hopes, affections, ambitions and experiences of humanity. "The Tale of the Old Settler" was a dramatic poem of great power and beauty. Carleton writes with exceeding reverence, but he has a delightful humor, that was well received by his hearers. The audience warmed to the poet instantly, and gave him the closest attention and heartiest applause. He has a full voice, droll at times, although pathetic when needs be. The swift arrows he shot at all sorts of follies were tipped with genuine wisdom and feathered with kindly jests. Carleton talks like he writes—from the heart out, and he is peculiarly the poet of the people.

IN THE MINING CAMPS.

The following letter, received in New York a while ago, by the publishers of "Farm Ballads," etc., "explains itself," as the newspapers say:

HARPER & BROTHERS, New York:

Please send by registered mail to —, Bonanza City, Idaho, six copies of Will Carleton's works—

two "Ballads," two "Legends" and two "Festivals." Enclosed please find price of same. More orders will follow. I tell you, Mr. Carleton does get on the blind side of us old mountain miners, and I must say, blessings on the head of our home poet. The "First Settler's Story" never fails to break up the fountains of the great deep; and the next question is, "What do those books cost?" Why, brother Harper, I have been in deep repentance ever since I read that story last summer. I have been away from home now two years, and the sad fact remains with me, that I too often used to look about for "blame-timber," and scold the "sweet wife-girl" that kept house for me. Well, I am now her humble lover, and when I go home, I'll ask forgiveness of her; and a great many other husbands could safely go and do likewise. Yours truly, * *

WILL CARLETON AMONG THE CANADIANS.

AN AUDIENCE TAKEN BY STORM—A STRANGE MEDLEY OF LAUGHTER AND TEARS.

It was a strange scene in the City Hall last night.

Mayor Whiting introduced Mr. Carleton in well-chosen words to his first Kingston audience. The poet announced that his subject was a poem lecture—"The Science of Home." His theme was the universal vital one of how to make home happy. By touching references to the sanctity of home he brought the audience fully into sympathy with the subject and secured a control over them that was masterful and complete—and it was maintained to the close. From breathless, strained silence to uproarious laughter, and back again the alternations went as the poet willed. Some old citizens could be seen with handkerchief in hand, alternately wiping away the tears and stuffing it into their mouths to stifle laughter. Little children, too, enjoyed it to the full. Indeed, it was a splendid tribute to the poet's power. Out of the picturesque panorama that passed before the audience for about two hours, perhaps the most affecting was the man who came into the world "with an argument in each hand," who "argued himself out of churches and argued himself into court," whose sweet wife fell "a victim to arguments pro and con," he himself ending "a drifted, logical wreck," passing to the haven of souls, there to "argue concerning his seat." Or perhaps it was "Poor Picnic Sam." The audience cried and laughed in sympathy with the poor ragamuffin's story. Carleton told the story with intervals of eloquent silence that were peculiarly thrilling. The audience passed through them breathless. One saw many weeping over the "poor, dead, drenched hero" who became then the "society success." The rendering of "Over the Hill to the Poorhouse" was heart-rending. An electric tremor of gladness passed through the audience when it came to the "private resurrection" and its joyful conclusion. Then came the "Velocipede Fellow," that "wheel-scamp"—irresistibly humorous. Then the rink scene, the sea-bathing—"If I'd a-spoke it'd a-dried up all the air." The comical oburgation of the old man was irresistible. When the poet had concluded, the audience gave him a spontaneous and repeated ovation.

WILL CARLETON—Poet, Orator, Lecturer.

The following extracts, regarding Will Carleton, are from the well-known and brilliant book of Mrs. Sarah K. Bolton, entitled "Famous American Authors":

"In Brooklyn, N. Y., lives Will Carleton, one of our younger and most-popular poets. He has touched the hearts of the people as few others have done. He has made home and home affections sweeter to hundreds of thousands; he has written with a desire to make the world purer and nobler; infinitely above writing merely 'for Art's sake.' The Carleton home has comfort and refinement; pictures which show that the author has traveled widely and appreciatively; a sweet-faced mother, who is and ought to be proud of her successful son, and an accomplished wife, who is devoted to charitable and noble works. The home is full of sunshine, both from nature and from cordial hearts, and sincerity and peace reign within it. The attractive parlors, in blue, are not the most-attractive rooms in the house, for one naturally turns to the place where the poet does his daily work. In an upper chamber, rich only in books, at a plain desk, with nothing to distract his thoughts, Will Carleton usually writes through the morning hours. He rises early, never composes before breakfast, thinks over his subjects carefully, and then, when the work is in mind, writes out of a full heart. He said to a friend: 'I do not dash off my lines. They do not come to me hastily. The construction of a poem with me is a labor of care and is often slow work.' In this study are books given by many authors, and letters with hearty and encouraging words from poets like the warm-hearted John G. Whittier. There is another large desk, similar to the one where the poetry is written, and this is devoted to lecture correspondence and other business interests."

"For fifteen years Mr. Carleton, young as he is, has been a popular lecturer, reading his own productions. He has gained a competency from this and the sale of several hundred thousand copies of his poems. He was born October 21, 1845, in Hudson, Mich., the youngest of five children, the only one of them now living. The father, in early life, moved from New Hampshire, and in a dense forest cleared a farm for himself. He was a practical, hard-working man, and, though a devoted Christian, perhaps did not see as much poetry in life as his cheerful wife, who, even in this wilderness, wrote poems and kept many more in her heart unwritten—perhaps, better still, sung them into the heart of her youngest child. The father was fond of reading and wished to give his children the best education possible in this isolated farm life. The boy Will had an eager desire for books, and while attending the district school managed to study Latin and a little Greek, though these studies were considered useless to a farmer's son. Though frail in health, apparently predisposed to consumption later, he soon walked five miles daily through snow and mud to attend the High School."

"Meantime poetry was in the school-boy's mind as thoroughly as his studies. His first poem, at 10, was a letter in rhyme to an older sister who was at a boarding-school. When the High-School course was finished, the lad naturally longed to go to college. But how could the money be obtained? He had seen his father struggling for years to pay off the mortgage on the farm, and his heart ached to help him rather than be a burden. He would look about for a school to teach. A position was found where, by instructing fifty-three scholars, he could earn $4 a week. This did not produce wealth rapidly, but, with strict economy, it made an entrance to Hillsdale College possible in 1865, when he was 20 years old."

"In his Junior vacation, in the Summer of 1868, he wrote for the political campaign a poem entitled 'Fax,' and decided to read it in some town at a distance from the college, to try its power and his own. A student with no money in his pocket has strong incentives to courage and exertion. A small room was hired for the delivery of the poetic lecture. Of course the matter must be advertised. Young Carleton was equal to the occasion. He went to a wall-paper establishment and bought a large amount of paper for a small amount of money. Then, at a painter's shop, with a brush he indicated in readable-size letters the name of the lecturer and place and time of entertainment. The town learned something of the young man's enterprise when these placards were seen. When evening came, a small number assembled, sitting near the door, that they might retire if the poem proved to be uninteresting. The young poet, somewhat frightened at first, soon found himself deeply interested, and his audience also, and when the lecture was finished all declared that a larger hall must be procured and their friends must hear so good a thing. A church was secured and a good audience was present. Several dollars were cleared above expenses, and here and in the neighboring towns enough money was made to carry him through college year."

what next? He had sent some poems to a small paper in Chicago, and because the heart of the editor was touched he came to Hillsdale to see the author and offer him a position on his journal. The pay was small—$12 a week—but the work would give experience and was accepted. Not long after the editor of a Hillsdale paper offered him one third of his income from that source, and Carleton returned to the college town, where he helped to make a bright and interesting newspaper. Several poems had become more or less known—'The City of Boston,' 'Death Doomed,' and that tender and beautiful poem, 'Cover Them Over,' which has been read again and again on Decoration Days."

"Like other young authors, Will Carleton was desirous of seeing his poems in book form. He wrote to a score or more publishers, and, as they well knew that first books of poems almost never pay, all 'declined with thanks.' It was the old experience, that sometimes kills and sometimes nerves the arms for the conflict. He at once decided to publish, at his own expense, and nearly 2000 of the little volumes were sold, largely among his friends in the West. But the East was soon to hear him. In 1871, he says, 'I was much impressed by the great prevalence of divorces and would often stray into our court-room and hear the testimony in the various cases. It was here that I heard and saw the domestic troubles of others and they gave me the idea of 'Betsey and I are out.' He sent the poem gratuitously to The Toledo Blade. At once it was copied into hundreds of papers, among them Harper's Weekly, whose editor asked to illustrate it and wrote to the author, requesting something from his pen. He sent them 'Over the Hill to the Poor House,' receiving $30 for it; 'Gone with a Han'somer Man,' 'Out of the Old House, Nancy,' and others. Henceforward the day of 'wall-paper advertising' of lectures and writing of poems gratuitously was over. Fame had come to Will Carleton at 26. He had spoken with his warm, earnest heart to the people and the people had made answer."

"Mr. Carleton is a tall, vigorous-looking man, who believes in outdoor exercise, especially walking, who is fond of rowing, sailing and horseback riding, who uses no stimulants, who is kindly in manner yet decided in character, who honors womanhood and all that is pure and elevating, who is fond of music, playing on several instruments, and who lives in and enjoys such a home as he describes in 'City Ballads':

"A home that rejoices in Love's saving heaven Comes deliciously nigh to the splendors of Heaven."

The Corner in May Corn on the Chicago Board Broken This Morning.

In Two Minutes the Price Dropped From One Dollar to Fifty Cents.

The Clique Had Not the Ready Cash to Take all the Corn Offered.

Post & Martin, the Manipulators of the Deal, Have Failed and Armour Smiles.

CHICAGO, May 31.—The culmination of the corner in May corn today resulted in an extraordinary scene on the floor of the board of trade. One dollar a bushel was the price demanded by the clique that had secured control of nearly the entire supply available in this market. The crowd of traders in the corn pit occupied every inch of room and far exceeded the wheat crowd in dimensions, to say nothing of lung power. Samuel Adams and other clique brokers were incessantly bidding $1, while Baxter and another set howled offers at $1.02. No such amount of trading as a bushel is remembered in the history of the trade in Chicago.

In the midst of the excitement the situation suddenly changed. Within less than two minutes the price dropped 50 cents a bushel. The fall was from $1, the price fixed by the clique, and at which they had given the tip they would settle with any and every body. The amount that was crowded upon the clique at that price had proved too much for their resources, however, and they were beaten at their own game. The collapse came shortly before noon. Check in payment for corn was offered on the Wear Commission company. A demand that it be certified was not acceded to promptly. Instantly the market was deluged with offers of corn and the clique was swamped. The refusal to certify to the checks of Coster & Martin by the banks was quickly followed by the announcement of their failure and all firms having contracts with them in their efforts to land him had pulled themselves into deep water without so much as disturbing his serenity. There were many reports of wild estimates as to the losses sustained by Coster & Martin. It was definitely known that in addition, to the capital required to carry through their deal up today they needed this morning half a million dollars or upwards to stand up under the unexpectedly large amount of corn hurried into the city at the last minute. They did not have the ready cash to do it and down they went, ruined in two minutes.

THE SYRACUSE CONVENTION.
The Cleveland Men of New York Elect Delegates to Chicago.
SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 31.—The clans are gathering. Ex-Secretary Charles S. Fairchild said this morning: "If we stayed here a few days more there is no doubt that there would be many vexatious questions propounded. Never was a convention confronted with such serious problems and yet I may at the same time say never was a convention's line of action plainer. As I see it, our duty is to represent the people of this state by holding as nearly perfect an organization as possible. Now in regard to our continuing the present or striving for a new state organically, I want to say that it will all depend upon our reception at the national convention. If we are recognized, we shall continue the present provisional committee and make it the permanent state committee. We do not believe that after recognition we would be hatching a rival Democratic organization. It would be a representative organization, and in fact is now. We are not fighting factionally and even if you put us on the plane of a contest, we should be deficient in courage and unrepresentative did we not complete the work of this convention by completing a thorough state organization."

Hon. Wm. E. Maxwell, ex-superintendent of insurance of the state, said: "We should proceed as if no other convention had ever been held. As we represent the Democrats of the state, we should complete our organization."

The big Alhambra rink was not decorated very brilliantly for the convention. Three flags made the total of the stage decorations. Colored banners of cardboard marked the delegation divisions in the hall. Not a banner was hung from the roof or walls. The doors were ordered closed against the public until noon, but the ticket holders slipped in by twos and threes and five minutes before the noon hour almost every seat in the hall was occupied. The heat was intense and the delegates began to shed their coats. At 2:28 when Mr. Fairchild stepped to the front of the platform to call the house to order, the convention cheered again and again.

When quiet had been restored Mr. Fairchild said: "On behalf of the provisional state committee, I call this convention of Democrats of the state of New York to order." (Cheers.) Continuing, Mr. Fairchild reviewed in a few words the preliminaries which led to the holding of the convention. He then presented the name of John D. Kernan, of Oneida, for temporary chairman.

Mr. Kernan said: "This convention is a halt on the march to the national Democratic convention at Chicago of an army of 200,000 New York Democrats and of as many more enlisted sympathizers. They go to wage war against their disfranchisement in that convention by leaders who have made unwise and crafty use of party machinery for personal ends, and who have overridden time honored customs and usages of the Democratic party. We claim under these rules our right to insist at Chicago that the call for and manipulation of the February convention was an abuse of trust and violation of Democratic rights; that its proceedings then misrepresented a large element of disfranchised Democrats and now misrepresented an overwhelming sentiment which since then has grown to vast proportions throughout the state. If our strength did not lie in the will of the people the sun would shine at midnight before the loyal rank and file of the Democrats of this state would don the garb of contestants and give to this cause its unprecedented growth and its clearly marked intensity of purpose."

"The people, neither disciplined, led nor organized, are in this movement. That is their strength. They have risen in the might of their sovereign majesty for weighty reasons to let it be known that they rule, that they have no masters, and that they want their rights as Democrats to represent them. When the people are in this mood it is generally found that the concession to them of the right of way is as prudent as though they were dynamite. The February convention was a mistake from every standpoint; in some aspects it was a crime, indictable at Chicago. No one before ever attempted to put the party in a hole by such a device as a February convention."

Mr. Kernan then reviewed the triumphs of the Democracy in New York and continued: "The disaster of 1888 came because the people did not at once see, as they have since been learning more and more clearly to see, the right and wrong of this complicated tariff question, and because of the corrupt use of money poured out by the carnival of monopolists, trusts and manufacturers, who were subsequently rewarded by the McKinley tariff which, as was inevitable, has already proved to be a disappointment even to them. The elections of 1890 were the first fruits of the tariff message of 1887. Since then and especially since the February convention did us the kindness to arouse the people to the situation and to the designs of party leaders there has grown up in hamlets, towns, counties and states a universal demand, which is now as broad as this Union, that he who trusted the people and made the issue in the coming campaign be chosen to lead the people out of the land of Egypt and out of the house of bondage into which they have been led by Republican misrule."

"If we are to fight our guns for all they are worth, who but Cleveland should command the battery; who should stand at the helm when the old ship sails into safe and pleasant waters in November next with victory's flag flying at her mast-head, but he, who stood upon the prow in the midst of danger when the winds and waves of tempestuous days sought his destruction? Let us, then, in onward, endless course to tend. Are but eddies of that mighty stream that run to its appointed end?"

"Yes, to its end—the platform, the nominee at Chicago, and victory."

Mr. Kernan finished speaking at 1 o'clock. H. D. Baldwin was elected reading secretary, and James F. Ondon recording secretary of the convention. The roll of the convention was then called. The usual committees on permanent organization, credentials and resolutions were appointed. A motion to appoint a committee to name delegates at large to Chicago was adopted and the convention took a recess until 3:30 p. m.

After reassembling the convention chose Frederick R. Couderc, of New York, Alex E. Orr, David C. Robinson and Mayor Bishop, of Buffalo, delegates at large to Chicago.

THE SILVER CONFERENCE.

Germany Will Accept the Invitation to Participate.
LONDON, May 31.—A despatch to the Times from Berlin states that the American minister at Berlin has received assurances that the German government will accept the invitation of the United States to take part in an international silver conference. Germany is not particularly interested in the rehabilitation of silver. As yet no practical difficulty has arisen from the fact that by an oversight her great currency reform did not include a stock of 100,000,000,000 silver thalers, which if placed in circulation would still constitute a legal tender.

It is believed that the government could at any time, owing to the gradual increase of population and the normal demand for silver, gradually dispose of this stock without affecting the stability of the currency, now based on gold. It is admitted in Berlin that England's influence in the world's money markets is a preponderating one, and as there is no reason to believe that she will yield her principles at the demand of the American silver men, any minor remedial measures she might endorse to arrest the rapid fall of silver would probably receive the support of Germany.

A Fatal Explosion.
WILKESBARRE, Pa., May 31.—An explosion of gas occurred in the West End coal mine at Mocaquagua this morning where eleven men were at work. Two of the miners are dead and all the others are seriously injured. The cause of the explosion is not known.

The Clever Sergeant-at-Arms of the Lady Managers of the World's Fair.

Miss Mary Elma Ruselle, of New Jersey, is the Energetic and Active Lady.

The Recent Letter Written by Mr. Gladstone in Denunciation of Woman Suffrage.

Miss Mary Elma Ruselle, of Newark, N. J., is the sergeant-at-arms of the board of lady managers of the World's Columbian exposition. She was born in New York city, and is a descendant of the French on both sides of the house.

Miss Ruselle received her education in the public schools of New York city, the Leonard institute, at Florida, N. Y., and the Morris Female institute, at Morristown, N. J. She is a lady who

MARY ELMA RUSSELLE. possesses qualities that will enable her to fill her office well, being energetic, active and untiring. She is of medium height, with a plump figure, blue eyes and an animated manner. She is one of the many live women who are working hard for the success of the women's building in the great exhibit.

Miss Ruselle was first elected to hold her office for the executive committee only, but about a year ago was appointed to act with reference to the entire board of lady managers.

WOMAN'S WORLD IN PARAGRAPHS.

The G. O. M.'s Pronouncement Against Woman Suffrage.

With that superior smack which only an Englishman can give to his utterances on the woman question, the editor of the London Speaker, Mr. Gladstone's own private organ, congratulates the Liberal party of Great Britain that by means of Mr. Gladstone's letter denouncing woman suffrage it has been delivered from a danger that was really threatening. Now that the G. O. M. has thus snuffed out the troublesome females, The Speaker is sure we shall hear no more of woman suffrage, and the Liberal party will sail serenely on to victory. Hold on, Mr. Speaker! Are you aware that a woman never adopts the unpopular advocacy of woman suffrage until she has been convinced by investigation and mature deliberation that it is the right thing? Once committing herself to this unpopular side, she sticks to it. Are you aware that in Great Britain both parties are coming to depend more and more on women's aid in carrying elections; that thus women are being drawn more and more into politics, and this political education opens their eyes so rapidly that they are steadily being converted to the faith of the ballot for women? This is true both of the Primrose league, which is the conservative ladies' organization, and of the Women's Liberal league. Therefore, when the G. O. M. writes the pompous and insulting letter against woman suffrage, he gives a deliberate slap in the face to some of the Liberal party's most influential friends and the ablest women in England. It is not in human nature not to resent such an insult. The result will be that many of these ladies will withdraw their influence and enthusiasm entirely from the Liberal party and Gladstone. They will work against him and it with might and main. We commend to the G. O. M. that old American story of the buffalo bull that tried to butt a railway engine off the track.

A lady tells us in Eleanor Kirk's "Idea" that she was one day standing in a dry goods establishment when she heard the proprietor exclaim with an oath, "I wish these blasted old women would not come to me for work." Then he remarked further that there was an aged fiend of the feminine gender. The writer turned and was surprised to see that the object of his anathema was a good looking woman of forty. Well, there is no help for it. Men are men. The only way is for every girl who is not a Vanderbilt or an Astor or the daughter of a sleeping car porter to learn some good paying occupation early in her youth, stick to it and lay up money. Then she need not fear the poorhouse when she is forty.

Helen Gardner, author of "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" has published another book, this time a volume of short stories called "Pushed by Unseen Hands." It is a study of heredity and social conditions, and will be translated and published also in Germany. Dr. Spitzka, the eminent authority on mental diseases, tells us that she has dealt with her subject in a way that he had only believed possible to a specialist. Miss Gardner has in a marked degree the faculty of making scientific topics interesting to the ordinary reader.

The Psychological Science congress, to be held during the World's fair at Chicago, has for its chairman Colonel John C. Bundy, editor of The Religio-Philosophical Journal, and for its vice chairman Professor Elliott Cues, of the Smithsonian institution, Washington. Among members of its advisory council are Rev. Lieber Newton, Rev. Robert Collyer, Professor James of Harvard, Rev. Minot J. Savage of Boston, Mrs. J. C. Croly (Jenny June), Frances Willard and Lady Somerset. All very well, but why do I mention it here? Because, of more than a hundred congresses to be held at Chicago during the World's fair, this on psychical science is the only one that has women as members of its advisory board. See?

Working girls are exactly as virtuous and respectable as the daughters of millionaires, and I am glad to see that the cruel and slanderous attempts to make them out otherwise receive deserved rebuke. ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

ULTRA POLITE.

He Was Very Sorry, but He Couldn't Go.

There is a good story about an old gentleman who had been accustomed to go to Egypt every year with an old covey as a traveling companion. One year his friend died, and was accordingly unable to go. The old gentleman, after much thought, inserted an advertisement asking any one who wished to go to Egypt under pleasant auspices to apply to him, and giving his address.

This advertisement was seen late at night by a young man who had been dining freely. He cogitated awhile, and then told the club porter to call a hansom. The cab was procured, and with a little muscular exertion on the part of the porter and the cabby the young man was stowed away in its recesses.

He told the man to drive to the address given in the advertisement. Arrived there he was assisted to the pavement, and with much dignity ordered the cabby to preface on the bell and knocker of the old fashioned residence. The advertiser stuck his venerable head out of the window, and after a parley conducted with explosive indignation, which was met with unflinching assurance from the pavement, the ancient came down and unbolted the door. When he had picked up the diner and stood him in the corner, the following conversation took place:

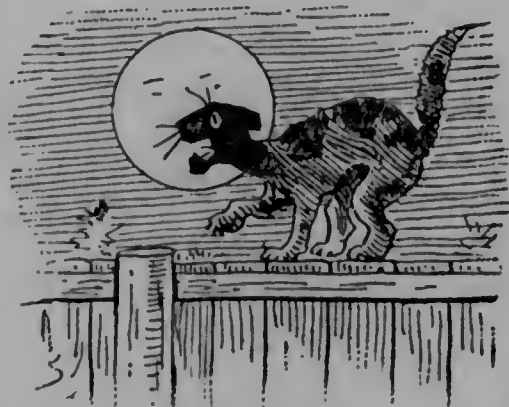

"Now, sir, what do you mean by waking me up at this hour?"
"Come to answer 'vertisement.'"
"Well, sir, this is no time to come on such an errand. What have you to say?"
"I've come to tell you—very sorry—can't go with you."—Yankee Blade.

A Creditor Outwitted.
The celebrated French poet, Saint-foix, who, in spite of his large income, was always in debt, sat one day in a barber's shop waiting to be shaved. He was lathered, when the door opened and a tradesman entered who happened to be one of the poet's largest creditors. No sooner did this man see Saint-foix than he angrily demanded his money. The poet composedly begged him not to make a scene.

"Won't you wait for the money until I am shaved?"
"Certainly," said the other, pleased at the prospect.

Saint-foix then made the barber a witness of the agreement, and immediately took a towel, wiped the lather from his face and left the shop. He wore a beard to the end of his days.—Tit-Bits.

I dote on his very absence!—Much Ado.

A Level Head.
Wife—My dear, the very next time we have a season of opera I want to go. Husband—Very well. I'll become an opera manager, if you wish. No doubt I can get up a company if I try.
"But why should you become a manager simply to take me to the opera?"
"It will be cheaper than buying seats, my dear."—New York Weekly.

To Complete the Outfit.
Wife—You know those imported pearl buttons that you got for me yesterday, darling.
Husband—Yes. What about them?
Wife—I was thinking that it would be so nice if I had some sort of a gown to go with them.—Cloak Review.

A Case of True Love.
"Are you sure Parker married Mrs. P. for love?"
"Certainly. Do you suppose a man who not only lets his wife buy his neckties, but usually wears them, doesn't love her passionately?"—Harper's Bazar.

A Correct Diagnosis.
First Friend (at the funeral)—Yes, Dr. Pellett told him he must take a rest, but Dick kept right on.
Second Friend—But the doctor had his way after all. He was correct in his diagnosis.—Boston Transcript.

Read What He Says.

Dr. Speer & Co., West Superior, Wis. Gentlemen—According to the promise I gave I forward you a testimonial of the troubles I had. George H. Thompson, make the following statement regarding the skill of Dr. Speer & Co., whose numerous cures have won them a high reputation as successful physicians: To whom it may concern: For a long time I had been a constant sufferer from catarrh of the bladder, accompanied by pains in the back, loss of flesh and what is worse that feeling of lassitude which overcomes sufferers from this disease, rendering them wholly unfit for work and making life a complete burden. I treated with several different physicians without obtaining any relief, and had almost abandoned hope, when I was prompted to seek the advice of a specialist. Accordingly, in June last, I consulted Dr. Speer & Co., placed myself in their care and now am happy to say that I am completely cured, thanks to their skillful treatment. Any further information will be gladly furnished to all who may feel interested. GEORGE H. THOMPSON, Operator and ticket agent of the Michigan Central railroad depot, Court street, Saginaw, West Side.

Saved the Engineer.

Harry Miller, an engineer stopping at the Norris House in Duluth, has been afflicted for four or five years with loss of self-confidence, with nervousness, sleeplessness, pain in the head and back, flabbiness of the muscles and cold, clammy sweats, and was, at the time he began treatment with Dr. Speer four months ago, a total wreck, both in his physical and nervous system. He is now wholly recovered and stands ready to go before any Justice of the Peace and swear to the facts above set forth. Dr. Speer's office is in the New York block in West Superior.

Secretary Thompson Believes the Appropriation For Duluth's Harbor Will Be $125,000.

The Bill Will Hardly be Taken up Until After the National Conventions.

Capt. Miller is Still in Washington and Will Remain Until Matters are Settled.

Secretary Thompson returned from Washington this morning and will be here for some time, although it is possible that matters may shape themselves so that he will be needed there again in two or three weeks. A Herald reporter interviewed Mr. Thompson this morning as to Duluth matters in Washington and he said:

"The telegraphic dispatches have familiarized almost every one with the status of the river and harbor bill. The senate increased our appropriation to $125,000 and while nothing is certain I have every reason to believe that it is going to go through the house. I do not expect to see the river and harbor bill disposed of until after the two national conventions. Chairman Blanchard of the house committee on rivers and harbors is in Louisiana looking after his canvas for the United States senate ship and may be a senator when he returns to Washington which may be in about three weeks. Senator Frye, chairman of the commerce committee, is away also to be gone three weeks and no attempt will be made to take up the bill unless these gentlemen authorize it which is something very seldom done. I didn't expect to see it brought up for two or three weeks. In the senate nobody expects that there will be a quorum until after the national conventions."

Mr. Thompson was asked as to the probability for securing the use of the appropriation at once upon its passage without waiting for the regular government form of advertising for contracts and said: "Capt. Miller and myself did not think that there would be any use in trying to secure this until the bill is passed. It has been done before and we may be able to arrange it this time. There is an emergency clause in the laws which make it possible where facts exist which will justify it."

"Do you think that the government will allow the building of a bridge from Fifth avenue west to Minnesota Point?" asked the reporter.

"We can never tell until we try what the government will do. One thing is sure, we will have the strenuous opposition of the vesselmen, no matter where we want to put a bridge. They will have a much weaker case than they did with the canal bridge, but they will fight it tooth and nail just the same."

"I believe and I think it is the general feeling that the work that has been done in Washington this year has paid and I think it would be wise for Duluth to always have a representative there, at least until we get a thorough-going representative in congress from our own city."

Capt. Miller is still in Washington and will remain until matters are settled, or until he is recalled. Mr. Thompson says that it is desirable to have someone there. His work here has accumulated somewhat, and with the prospect that matters might be tied up in Washington for nearly a month, he deemed it best to return, if it is necessary for him to go back to Washington again.

ANOTHER MEMORIAL DAY.

The Colored People Observe Their Annual Day of Prayer Today.

Today the colored people of the city are observing their annual day of prayer and fasting. Arrangements for the exercises were completed last evening by the committees and all the colored people in the city will participate. Afternoon services will be held at St. Mark's church, corner Fourth street and Fourth avenue west, at 3 o'clock. In the evening the exercises will be held at the Republican headquarters and the following program has been arranged:

Serious singing. Assembly Prayer. William Humphreys
Address. Rev. A. Taylor
Prayer. Superior Band
Music. E. A. Benson
Address. H. A. Lewis
Selection. Harris Miller Band
Address. C. W. Dorsey
Music. Quartet
Address. R. H. Bixstone
Music. Harris Band
Address. W. H. Humphreys
Music. Superior Band Benediction.

The colored citizens of Superior are to join with their Duluth brethren in the observance of the day. The steamer Estelle will bring over 200 of them during the evening and they will remain until after the evening exercises.

BACKING THEIR FAVORITES.

Two Duluth Horses Are Matched for a Big Race.

A big race between Duluth horses has been arranged and the articles have been signed and all points agreed upon. Capt. Sullivan has matched his pacer T. B. against A. Bailey's Aleck and both are determined to win. Each has posted $500 and some side bets have been made as well. The race is to come off on July 30 at the Minnehaha Driving park at Minneapolis. The horses will be put in training at once.

ONLY A FEW.

Three Days' Offenders Brought Before Judge Powell This Morning.

There were only six culprits before Judge Powell this morning, quite a small record for the Saturday, Sunday and Monday "catch" of the police force, and Officer Kohagen appeared to be the only man who had been real busy for he was credited on the court slip with five of the arrests. Pat Hayden, C. Darrell and Mike Ryan, all drunks, went up for the usual ten days, and William Brown, also a drunk, pleaded guilty, but was given a chance to get out of town and go back to work. He went as quick as he could amble out of the courtroom. Albert Brandon and his wife Jennie Brandon, live in the parlous of St. Croix avenue and it appears that Jennie's jivial jag got a little bit unwieldy and she proceeded to do up a Scandinavian neighbor, to which proceeding her husband, Albert, was vigorously an assistant. They were pulled by Officer Kohagen, the former for being disorderly and the woman for being drunk and disorderly. The police matron gained the ear of the judge and he allowed the woman to go free under a suspended sentence as she had pleaded guilty, but the man will be tried this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

THE BICYCLE RACES.

Nine Who-Imon Make the Run to London and Return.

Yesterday's bicycle race was the first club race ever held in Duluth and nine wheelmen participated. The course was from Dodge's store corner at the Spalding, on Michigan street, east to the city limits and around the little schoolhouse at the west side of the London town plat and back, a distance of eight miles. The street for blocks was lined with spectators and considerable difficulty was experienced in keeping a clear way for the start which was a "stand and mount." The first man got away at 4 o'clock and the last man at 4:30, and at 4:41 one detected club man returned. It was Merritt, who had been thrown by a big stone in his effort to avoid a pedestrian. The accident injured his wheel and let him out of the race. The course after leaving Michigan street was a A NEW PRESIDENT

Jacob Gould Schurman, recently Elected to Succeed President Adams in Yale University.

Two Strange Cases Where Men Have Failed to Claim Their Own Savings.

A Quarter Breed Indian is a Republican Candidate for Congress in Kansas.

Jacob Gould Schurman, who was recently unanimously elected president of Cornell university to succeed President Adams, resigned, is a very young man to fill so important a post, but if past achievements may be taken as an indication of future work, Professor Schurman will go down in college history as one of the best and ablest presidents of the university. He was born in Freetown, P. E. I., and is thirty-eight years old. His early education was received in the schools of his native village. When he was thirteen the necessities of his family compelled him to go to work in a country store. Even then he was ambitious to obtain a good education and every spare moment was spent in study.

In 1870 he entered the Prince of Wales college, in Charlottetown, P. E. I., and there won a government scholarship, which gave him a living and education for the next two years. Then he went to Acadia college, in Nova Scotia, and won the London University bachelorship scholarship, worth $200 a year for three years. He took his degree in 1877, on which occasion he won the Hume scholarship in political economy.

He devoted the following winter to the study of mental and moral philosophy in Edinburgh. A year later he took his doctor's degree in the same city and his master's degree in London. Then he entered against severe competitors in the struggle for the Hibbert traveling fellowship, worth $1,000 a year for two years. He won this prize and spent the allotted time studying at the Hibbert fellow at Heidelberg, Berlin, Göttingen and the Italian educational centers.

During his stay in Europe he enjoyed the acquaintance and, in several instances, the friendship of some of the greatest philosophical teachers of the century. The Acadia college called him in 1880 as professor of English literature, political economy and psychology. At the end of two years he went to Dalhousie college, where he occupied the chair of metaphysics and English literature. His connection with Cornell university began in 1886, when he became the head of the philosophical department.

Professor Schurman was married in 1884 to a daughter of George Munro, the millionaire New York publisher.

ABANDONMENT OF WEALTH.

Two Strange Cases Illustrating the Instability of Human Affairs.

Men struggle for years to accumulate wealth, and then in a variety of mysterious ways abandon its control. Forgetfulness, caused by age, was what bothered an Auburn (Me.) man, but honesty on the part of those who handled his cash saved him from loss. In 1841 he placed $2,000 in a savings bank, and then being old, promptly forgot all about the transaction. Recently one of his relatives learned of the deposit, and on demand the cashier turned over to the nonagenarian nearly $5,000, which represented the capital and accumulated interest of twenty-one years.

But a still stranger case is that to which the Philadelphia Record called attention not long ago. According to that paper there is a man in business on Arch street, who, while he does not own the building he occupies, and has no friendly relations with the person who does own it, has paid no rent and has never been asked to do so. For eighteen years the business man has been awaiting the appearance either of the landlord or the latter's agent, and during that long period he has paid the taxes on the building and kept it in thorough repair. His business has been a most prosperous one, and several rivals have felt the sting of his ability to sail much closer to the wind than they do owing to his being relieved of the usual yoke of rent day. It is not at all unlikely that the property will become his by right of undisputed possession at the expiration of twenty-one years, and it is worth many thousands of dollars. Those who are conversant with the strange case have come to the conclusion that the owner has long been dead, and it is supposed that he was lost at sea. It is just such a case in real estate as not infrequently occurs in the business of long established savings banks which hold funds that are never called for by their owners or their heirs.

Where Rosewood Gets Its Name.

Many people suppose that rosewood takes its name from its color, but this is a mistake. Rosewood is not red nor yellow, but almost black. Its name comes from the fact that when first cut it exhales a perfume similar to that of the rose, and although the dried rosewood of commerce retains no trace of this early perfume the name lingers as a relic of the early history of the wood.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

India and China Silks.

From time immemorial India and China have been great silk raising regions. Japan is now added to them. These countries more than three parts of the world's supply. India has not only the silkworm, but the tussah moth, which supplies the strong, yellowish tussah silk, so much worn of late. There is also a variety of spinner that feeds on the leaves of the castor oil bean.—Chicago Tribune.

MASCULINE MENTION.

Senator Berry, of Arkansas, has only one leg.

Congressman Geary, of California, the author of the anti-Chinese bill, is a native of Boston.

Ex-Governor Glavin, of Massachusetts, is a well preserved, elderly gentleman, with a face of strong intelligence and very courteous manners.

Peter Avrell Browne Widener, the traction twenty-millionaire was named for Peter A. Browne, one of Philadelphia's most learned lawyers.

Senator Richard Coke, of Texas, is different to his personal appearance. He never wears a cravat, but his long gray beard makes the absence of it noticeable.

Senator Evans once said, in reference to the charge that he preferred to wear an ancient hat, that he sometimes bought as many as eight new pieces of headgear a year.

Senor Romero, the Mexican minister, has acquired the reputation of being the most astute of the diplomatists in Washington. He has been known to pass sixteen hours at his desk.

Senator Perkins, who succeeded Plumb, is particularly proud of the fact that he has never broken an engagement of any sort and has always been on time when keeping an appointment.

Rochefort, already under sentence of imprisonment for life for conspiracy, is serving out with great sang froid in London his new sentence of twelve months' imprisonment for libeling the public prosecutor in Paris.

Neal Dow has been making scrapbooks for many years, and he has now twenty-three very large and thick volumes. He proposes to bequeath them to collections of archives to be placed in the Temperance temple at Chicago.

The two oldest pensioners on the rolls of the New York pension office, and two of the oldest in the United States, although pensioners are proverbially long lived, are General Tupper and General Dalley. They are veterans of 1812.

M. Goren, chief of the Paris detective force, wears a military mustache, dresses fashionably and is generally seen with a burning cigar between his fingers. M. Goren believes in sitting at his desk and thinking out mysteries.

Young Arthur, son of the late President Arthur, knows how to handle the ribbons of a stagecoach and looks well when perched upon the box seat toting a four-in-hand of spanking boys and having every seat filled with his admiring friends.

Colonel Jerome Bonaparte is described by Kate Field as a man with the most correct taste in the matter of dining at home in Washington. Kate adds that he is one of those persons who will always carry a walking stick, but will never need it.

Ex-Governor Robert L. Taylor, of Tennessee, is very much in love with his work in the lecture field. "I have more fun in a week now," he said the other day, "than I had in a year as governor. I'm glad I'm out of office, and I think I'm done with politics."

M. Inaudi, a young Frenchman, astonished the Paris Academy of Sciences by solving the most abstruse problems of hand. He can multiply or divide sums of twenty-four figures mentally without a blunder, but in all other intellectual ways he is dull.

The young Bay State congressman, John C. Crosby, though only thirty-two years old, is a college graduate, a lawyer, a member for six years of the school board, and he sat for two years in the Massachusetts house of representatives and two years in the state senate.

Unquestionably the oldest New Yorker is Colonel Charles Barclay Tappan. He was ninety-six years old on Feb. 5, 1892, and has lived in New York city for eighty years. He was born in Hanover, Morris county, N. Y., where his grandfather settled just before the Revolution.

Uncle Joshua Barstow, an inmate of the National Soldiers' home at Togus, Me., is one of the oldest printers in the country, and takes great pride in the fact that Horace Greely once worked at his elbow, and that he and Horace often raced for a "fat take" that came next on the hook.

Colonel A. K. McClure, editor of the Philadelphia Times, was attending a Grant banquet on the evening that his office was burned. Intelligence of the fire was brought him as he was about to respond to the toast, "The Press." Hastening to the scene, he saw the case was hopeless and coolly returned to the festivities.

FADS OF FASHION.

Little hoods are attached to nearly all garments worn in the street.

Parasols are made of the same material as the gowns in many instances, two yards of extra material being required.

Ties and slippers are made of kid to match the gowns. The darker shades of tan in Oxford ties will be worn this summer.

Women who can afford the luxury have lampshades to correspond with their various house gowns, so that a beautiful harmony may be preserved.

In gloves shades of fawn and heaver are much worn. Short gloves are still in favor for tailor made gowns, while long ones are relegated to evening wear.

The address is still placed at the top of letter paper, and is more used than the monogram, although that is by no means out of style. This is placed at one side.

The Greek style of coiffure is preferred to all others. The hair must be waved, and if possible all over. The yolk of an egg rubbed weekly into the roots of the hair, and then washed out with plenty of soft water, cleanses the hair and makes it soft, while a sun bath gives it a lightness and fluffiness very desirable to the blond type.

PHILOSOPHICAL COGITATIONS.

A man's heart belongs to his wife so long as he goes to her for comfort in his troubles.

The world is full of men who have things they want to sell for less than they paid for them.

Men pay too much attention to what they did, and not enough to what they are doing.

Every one wears some bit of snobishness; some people wear it under their gay colors and others wear it on top.

When a friend is in trouble don't annoy him by asking him if there is anything you can do; think up something appropriate and do it.

There are people who let the devil put a burden on their backs and then complain because the Lord does not help them to carry it.—Arlinson Globe.

LIFE LASTS LONG.

A Region Where All the General Conditions Seen Especially to Induce Longevity.

Five Generations of One Man Living in the Same House in Mexico.

They Have Intermarried Contrary to All the Accepted Laws of Consanguinity.

"I observe that when a man dies in this country at the age of 100 years, or thereabout, the papers elaborate on the occurrence in their news columns as if it were something wonderful," said Raymon Casanova, of Guadalajara, Mexico, who is in this city. "I know a score or more of people in Mexico considerably more than 100 years old, and who give promise of living many years yet. There is a limited area in the state of Tamaulipas whose climate, water and general condition seem especially to induce longevity. I visited the neighborhood a few months since and saw five generations of one man living in the same house. The eldest male was said to be 132 years old. He is shriveled and weakened, blind and almost dumb, but in other respects all of his vital functions appear to be strong and normal. There are perhaps fifty people in the neighborhood whose lives have spanned a century.

"They are a pastoral people of Spanish and Aztec blood and for generations have intermarried contrary to all the accepted laws of consanguinity. Their constitutions are not particularly robust and none of them is over 5 feet 6 inches tall. They are cut off from the rest of the world and are ignorant as to the great population of the globe, nor do they seem to have the slightest conception as to the mode of life of other people. They live in the most primitive way, and perhaps it is this absence of the tremendous pressure of modern civilization that largely conduces to their marvellous longevity," said Louis Globe-Democrat.

They Did Not Report Him.
On a recent trip on route to California, as I was leaving Chicago, I met a friend, also a traveling man, who was working the C. B. and Q. as far west as Omaha. We decided to stop at Galesburg over night and expected to leave the following morning on the 5 o'clock train. After working the town of course with success—supper, cigars and a game of billiards over, we left a call for 4:30 a. m. and retired. The proprietor of the hotel had engaged the services of a six foot two inch Swede, who had recently arrived in this country. He was the night watchman and the man who made the early calls. I was awakened by a knock that shook the house and a voice like thunder called, "Do you want to take the 5 o'clock train?"

"Well," he said, "it's gone," and down stairs he went. I looked at my watch and found it was then 5:30. He had neglected to make the call and being afraid, I would report him thought it was better late than never. After having breakfast and returning to the office we saw the big Swede waiting to interview us. He came over to us, and in broken English asked if we had reported him. We said no and had no intention of doing so. His face lightened up and he said:

"I think you are pretty good fellows." I don't know whether he doubted our veracity or not, but he remained in the vicinity of the office desk until the bus arrived to make the 10 o'clock train and then we took our departure.—New York Recorder.

A Physician's Experience.
The following story is about Dr. Wilsey, who saw himself die over and over again.

The doctor told how he saw himself go out of his body, saw his body lying on the bed, with his wife and sister kneeling by his side and weeping. He thought it a great joke on them that they should not know he was much alive as ever. He laughed outright at the "joke," and was surprised that they did not hear him laugh. He went out of the house down street, and then struck off into the country, thinking to himself, "This must be the road people take when they die."

He hadn't gone far when a voice warned him that if he got beyond a certain point he couldn't get back. But the sensation of being free from his body was so delightful and the landscape was so inviting that he felt no desire to return. All the while, however, he seemed to himself to be attached to his physical body by a fine, almost invisible thread, which kept drawing him back. He lost consciousness, and when he revived he was again lying on his bed with his family around him.—Boston Record.

A Vegetarian Cat.
A gentleman residing on Bush street is the owner of a black cat which he calls Nig, which has developed an extraordinary fondness for vegetables. "Nig is extremely fond of vegetables," said the owner of the cat. "We first noticed that he liked green peas when he was but 6 months old. Then my wife caught him eating some that had been left on a dish after dinner, and he was stealing them. After that I tried him on string beans, cauliflower, asparagus and green corn. He relishes them all and cries for any of the vegetables when they are set on the table and he does not get his share, but what he likes most is asparagus.

"I have known him to eat eleven plain boiled ones, one after another, and he only eats that portion which is soft. Potatoes? No, he seems to draw the line at potatoes, but he fills up on baked beans. He appears to enjoy them as much as does a Bostonian."—San Francisco Call.

A Palace Under Water.
A summer house under water, the occupant of which does not get wet, is one of the luxuries enjoyed by the king of Siam. In the center of a beautiful marble basin a glass house is standing 25 feet long by 14 wide. The sides, floor and roof of the house consist of plate glass held together by a transparent cement. The king enters the house when the heat of the day begins to grow unpleasant. The door is then closed and cemented.

After that a floodgate is opened and the basin is filled with water until it stands only a few inches below the roof of the house. It is clear that the temperature in this submarine palace cannot fail to be always cool and delightfully fresh. There the king spends the hot hours of the day. After they are past the water is drained off and the door taken out, when his majesty retraces his steps to his dining hall.—Chicago Herald.

FEMINE FANCIES.

Mrs. Carnot, wife of the proscribed French republic, is a countess in her own right.

Mrs. Ballington Booth is said to receive but seven dollars per week for her services to the Salvation Army.

One of the prettiest girls in Utah is Mrs. R. W. Sloan, of Salt Lake City, who is a granddaughter of Brigham Young.

Mrs. Custer, in a parlor lecture in Chicago on "Buffalo Hunting," said that she was one of the first women, if not the first, to engage in that daring diversion.

Mrs. Cleveland's baby is understood to have been named after Miss Ruth Burnett, the young Boston girl who has concluded to go into a convent.

Mrs. Amelia Edwards, the Egyptologist, walks half a mile before and after breakfast every day and a mile every afternoon. It is her invariable practice, regardless of the weather.

Miss Helen Gladstone is the vice principal of Newham college, the women's annex of Cambridge university. Miss Gladstone is forty-six years old and of a very retiring disposition.

The wife of ex-Governor Campbell, of Ohio, and the wife of Representative Cox, of the Seventeenth New York district, were classmates at Vassar, both ladies of distinguished attainments.

Lady Eryntrude Malet, wife of Sir Edward Malet, has a private collection of shoes, numbering nearly 1,000 pairs, from dainty satin to stonewashed. She has been known to wear as much as $300.00 worth of diamonds at a ball.

Mrs. Noble, wife of the secretary, and her two sisters, the Misses Halstead, resemble each other so closely that casual acquaintances distinguish between them with difficulty. They make no attempt to dress in a way to decrease the resemblance.

Miss Regina Morphy, of New Orleans, a niece of the great chess player, has composed a waltz called "The Paul Morphy Waltz," which she has dedicated to the Chess club of the Crescent City. Miss Morphy is accomplished in music and painting and speaks three languages fluently.

WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

The new British cologne will bear the queen's head without her crown.

Indiana will alone turn out 75,000 bicycles from her manufacturing this year.

More than a million dozen pairs of gloves, valued at $7,300,000, are made in Grenoble, France, every year.

During the year 1891 4,307 vessels passed through the Suez canal, and of those only twenty-six carried the American flag.

A new religious sect has been established in Virginia by a negro named Nathaniel Brown, which he calls the "no meat eaters."

The longest bridge in this country is the trestle which crosses a portion of Lake Pontchartrain in Louisiana. It is nearly twenty-five miles long.

The house of Jacques Plandreaux, built in New Rochelle in the year 1790, is standing and is supposed to be one of the oldest Huguenot houses in this country.

Glasgow, Scotland, has an industrial home where women who have come out of prison get a home provided for them and where they are employed in laundry work, for which they receive payment.

An ingenious woman has hit upon the idea of a "dress album," in which they cuttings of every gown belonging to its owner are to be chronologically arranged, under the dates on which they were purchased.

The original autograph commission of Captain Nathan Hale, of Connecticut, the martyr who died the Revolution, was sold for $1,775 at a recent auction in New London. The state of Connecticut sent in a bid of $250, but it was bought by a firm of autograph dealers, who now hold it at $5,000.

SNAP SHOTS.

The new Pura developer continues to find favor with amateurs, though its price is still somewhat high.

The spots which sometimes appear on pure gelatine plates are attributed to fatty matter contained in the gelatine.

The New York Camera club is one of the most prosperous clubs in New York. Mrs. Andrew Carnegie is a member and a most enthusiastic writer, as are more than a hundred other representative society women of New York.

Miss Barnes, in a recent lecture, said it was utterly useless to expect a child to grow from a negative desire, undeveloped, and with harsh contrasts, though it was possible to get good results, with careful management, from a thin negative if it had detail.

A miniature photographic camera attached to the barrel of a gun is the invention of Mr. Lechner, of Vienna. By an automatic shutter, working in unison with the trigger of the gun, the sportsman is able to obtain a perfect photograph of the bird or animal immediately before the shot or bullet has reached it.

With the object of avoiding the difficulty experienced in photographing a subject at a distance, foreground and background at the same time, a leading French photographer fits his camera with two shutters, one for the foreground and the other for the background, giving that for the former a greater and variable degree of opening.

ELECTRIC SPARKS.

A new system of duplex telegraphy has recently been devised which is both duplex and duplex in its nature.

Experiments are being made with systems of simultaneous telegraphy and telephony on the London-Paris circuit.

Delivery wagons, the motive power of which is electricity, are the newest vehicles in London. A green grocer has the first.

The largest telephone switchboard in the world is that in the exchange at Berlin, where 7,000 wires are connected with the main office.

Chicago owns her public electric light plants, and the cost of 2,000-candle power lights is only from fifteen to eighteen cents a night.

In Aberdeen, Scotland, tests are shortly to be made by electricity to ascertain if the current has any detrimental effect on the quality of the meat.

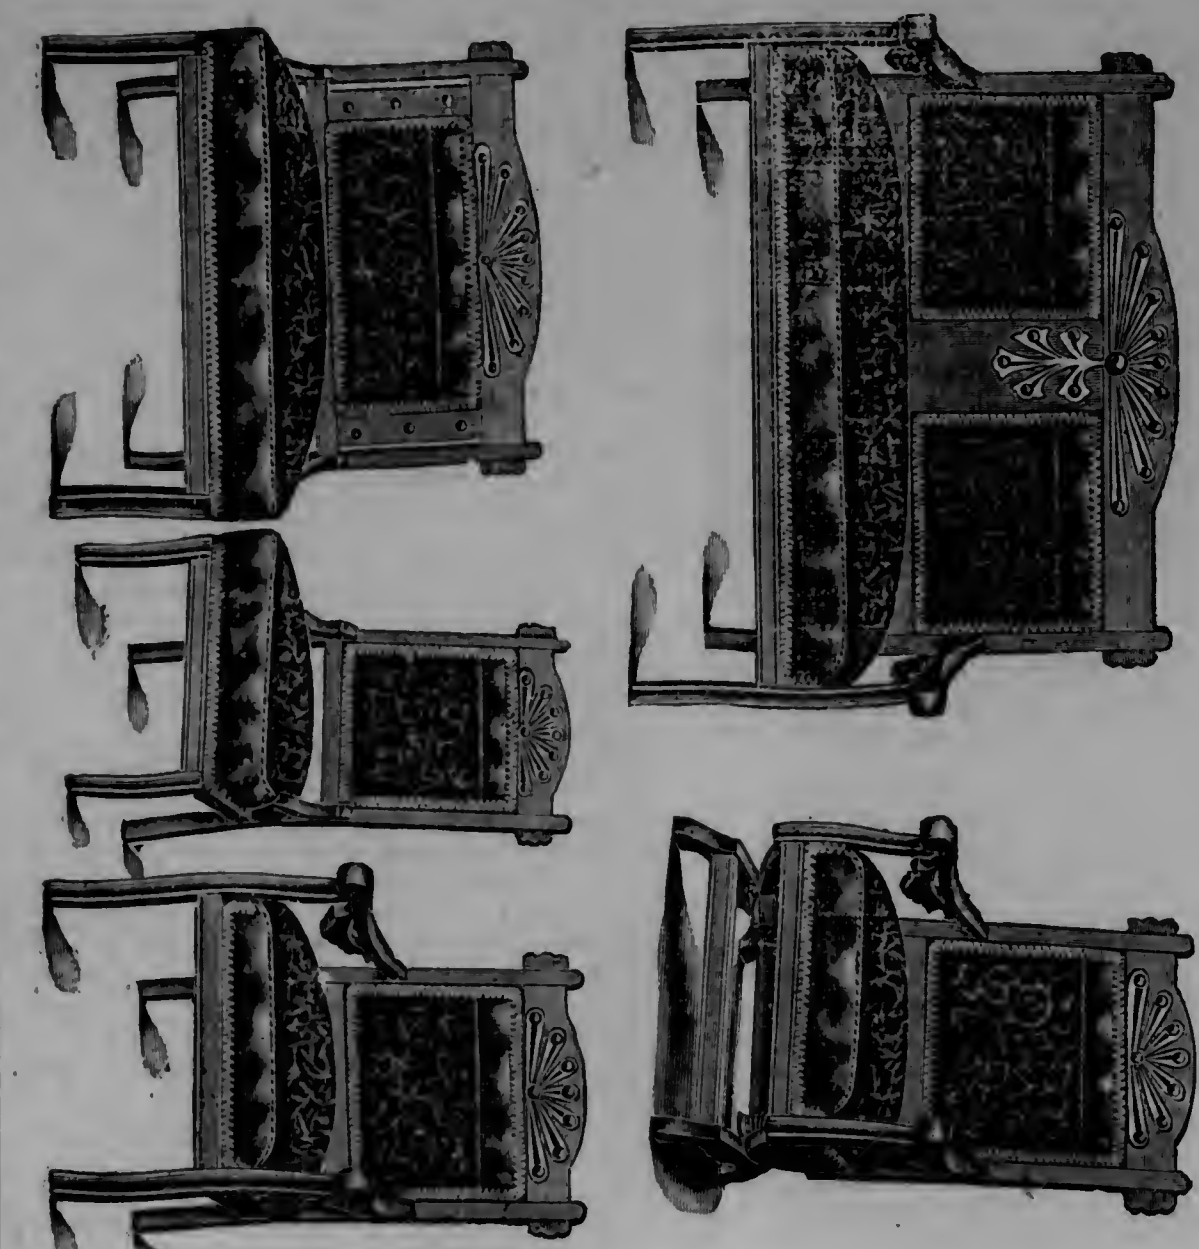

The latest novelties brought out by the Edison company are a street car controlling switch embodying new features, and a generator whose field coils can be removed in spoils for repair.

An electrical "transformer" has been exhibited in the Crystal Palace by which fifty horse power can be transmitted for a reasonable distance through a wire no thicker than a hair, and across the Atlantic, with a loss of two horse power, through a wire a tenth of an inch thick.

IS GAINING GROUND

Col. Graves' Friends are Hustling and Have the Fight Well in Hand.

They Are Making a Quiet Canvass and the Noise Comes From the Other Side.

The Confusion of the Kendall Followers Becomes More and More Apparent.

As the day of the Republican primaries approaches the confusion of the Kendall faction is becoming more and more apparent. They are claiming everything and declare that they have everything fixed. This may be partially true. They congratulated themselves that they had everything fixed when they appointed the inspectors for the caucuses, but this advantage will avail them nothing. The Graves supporters are organized and all conducting a quiet and thorough canvass, and when the caucuses open Thursday night they will be on hand. The Kendall men are spreading all manner of reports about the circulation of a booklet by the Graves boomers. The Kendall organ this morning says that three $100 bills have found their way into the hands of faithful friends of Mr. Kendall. This statement is too absurd to merit contradiction. It is very amusing to hear such charges coming from the Kendall followers.

It is the Kendall side which is making all the noise. The Graves supporters, like Col. Graves, will say very little and announce that their policy is to "say nothing and saw wood." A Herald reporter attempted to interview a number of the enthusiastic Graves supporters today, but nearly all preferred to have nothing said.

Judge Stearns, who has frequently been quoted, said: "Yes, Col. Graves is still my candidate. I was only considering whether to run for a sense of duty, and I am glad I'm out of it. Personally I have nothing against Mr. Kendall, but I believe that Col. Graves is a better representative of the character of man that we need at Washington."

Camille Poirier says: "Col. Graves is the man we want to go to congress from the standpoints of ability, experience and respectability. I support the nominee, but I would rather see Col. Graves get it than Kendall, because I believe he has the qualifications which we require and need from our representative. I am tired of the style of the politicians who put themselves forward without waiting to be asked. Col. Graves did not consent to run until requested to by a large number of the Republicans of the city on a written call. I believe he would represent us with credit."

J. H. LaVaque—I am decidedly in favor of Col. Graves for congress because he is eminently fitted for the position by education and profession and is the best qualified man we could get in point of experience. His legislative career will show his qualities and ability.

D. H. Twomey—Col. Graves is my choice. I have no hesitation in saying that. He is personally a good man and has the qualifications which we need in a congressman.

Neil McLachlan—We all know Col. Graves as a successful and thorough business man and he has shown the same qualifications in every public position which he has been called upon to fill. He is a clean man and would faithfully and intelligently represent the district.

Sewer Bids Opened.

The board of public works opened bids on a large number of sewer contracts today, but it will require several hours to figure them up. A bid of $15 from Young & Banks was received, for which sum they agree to remove the old Howard warehouse on St. Croix avenue, to retain the material. The site must be cleared by July 1.

Notes of Issue Filed.

Notice of the trial of an action where-in A. M. Kilgore is plaintiff and E. J. McLaughlin defendant has been filed with the clerk of the district court, but no other papers in the case. The same is true of Samuel F. Nirdlinger vs. H. W. Coffin as administrator. Notice of trial has also been filed in Edward Hurley vs. Duluth Gas and Water company, in which the complainant claims $154.10 damages sustained by reason of a broken water main. Elizabeth Wright versus the same defendant is a similar action in which the amount asked is $550.

Infante Modesty.

There is a young lady in Philadelphia who is so modest that she wears glasses to cover her naked eye. If Duluth should contain any such infinitely modest girls they would be well to see J. H. Ostrander, the expert optician at once, for he leaves the city Friday next. At present with F. D. Day, jeweler.

The Public Test.

Tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock the test of the fire pump on the Inman tug, Joe Dudley, will be made at the Northern Pacific docks. The fire commissioners and the aldermen will attend and it is desired that persons interested in dock protection be present.

WHEAT WENT LOWER.

The Close was Very Irregular on the Duluth Board.

The market opened today with an excellent demand for cash grades at 1/2c in advance of Friday's close. Cables were very weak but the report of a big decrease in wheat on passage and the bulge in corn had a strengthening effect. The short interest seems to have all covered in May wheat. The milling demand was principally local and the receipts of wheat were considerably larger than usual. Nearly the entire trading of today was confined to track wheat and cash wheat in store. Cash wheats were active up to the last half hour of the session. Hard wheat had an excellent demand late in the session. There was little trading in futures owing to the nervous condition of the markets. The close was easy and irregular at 1/4c to 3/4c below Friday's close. Following were the closing prices:

No. 1 hard—Cash, 85 1/2c; May, 85 1/2c; June, 86c; July, 86 1/2c; No. 1 northern—Cash, 84 1/2c; May, 84 1/2c; June, 85c; July, 85 1/2c; No. 2 northern—Cash, 76c; No. 3, 70c. Rejected, 60c. On track—No. 1 hard, 85c; No. 1 northern, 83 1/2c. Car inspection for the day 118. Receipts—Wheat, 72,092 bus; flour, 407 bus. Shipments—Wheat, 216,705 bus. Cars on track, 206; last year 310.

AMMONIA IN BAKING POWDER.

Discussion Before the American Chemical Society.

(Chicago Tribune.)

To the Editor of the Tribune: I have just seen the report in your issue of Sept. 3, of the discussion at the Washington meeting of the American Chemical society, Aug. 29, relative to the use of carbonate of ammonia in baking powders.

This report is incomplete and incorrect in many particulars, and as the paper which precipitated the discussion was read by me and was based upon my own experiments, I desire to make certain corrections in the interest of the truth and for the benefit of the large number of your readers to whom the question is one of great moment.

The paper as read before the society related that ammonia in baking powder is retained in the bread by reason of its affinity to the gluten. The consensus of opinion as expressed during the discussion was against the use of carbonate of ammonia in baking powder with the only exception of Dr. McKurtzie, who is now an employee of a baking powder company which uses carbonate of ammonia in its baking powder.

Of the other parties mentioned as having taken part in the discussion were Professor Dr. Barker of the university of Pennsylvania, who is the president of the society and one of our highest authorities. In answer to a pleading by the speaker that those made by others, showing quantities of ammonia were used in baking powders, he stated: "No matter how small the quantity, I must decline to be dosed medicinally without my consent when taking my meals."

Dr. E. H. Bartley, formerly chemist of the Brooklyn board of health and professor of chemistry at the Long Island college, likewise named, did not, I believe, take active part in the discussion, but is already on record as strongly opposed to the use of ammonium carbonate in baking powders.

Dr. Richardson volunteered only the question whether the flour used in the experiments was of good quality, of which I assured him by stating that it was the best and the flour used in my family.

From Mallet was not present. Your article is misleading in so far as it gives the impression that ammonia disappears on baking. My actual tests agree with those made by others, showing that ammonia remains in the bread. My investigations simply assign a new cause for its retention.

H. ENDENMANN, Ph. D.—New York Tribune, Sept. 17, 1891.

Note.—Dr. Endenmann, the writer of this communication, is well known in scientific circles, and was for twelve years chemist of the New York Board of Health.

The baking powder company above referred to is the Royal Baking Powder company of New York, and the employee, Dr. William McKurtzie, who defends that company's use of ammonia, is the much advertised government authority. There is no such office known under our government as that of government or United States government chemist.
